Texas Airliner Crash Kills 28; 3 From D. C.

DC-6 Burns After Hitting Buildings At Dallas Airport; 18 Survive Disaster

Dallas, Nov. 29 (AP).—An American Airlines plane crashed and exploded here today, and 28 persons died in white-hot flames.

Eighteen others survived as the big 60-passenger plane, one of its four engines spouting fire and another failing, plummeted to the edge of Dallas' Love Field airport and ripped itself to pieces against two buildings. Fourteen were in a hospital tonight. Four were discharged.

The plane, bound from New York via Washington to Mexico City, crashed at 6:45 a. m. (EST). Blue and white flames billowed high in the pre-dawn darkness. There were cries of agony and terror as stunned, hurt, survivors stumbled almost miraculously from the heaps of wreckage.

For hours afterward, firemen pulled charred bodies from the smoldering debris. Identification was slow.

The crippled ship, a DC-6, struck a combination hangar and office building of the Dallas Aviation School and plowed broadside into a plant that tests airplane engines

Crash Survivor Flies On to Wife's Funeral

By the United Press

Benjamin Bogish had to argue his way aboard the DC-6 airliner that crashed yesterday. He survived, suffering only a broken arm, and took another plane to Tucson, Ariz., to attend the funeral of his wife who died Monday.

Bogish, 58, a clothing firm executive from New York City, called American Airlines Monday night and was told Flight 157 was filled. When he explained the nature of his trip, the airline made room for him.

3 From D. C. Area Die in Texas Crash

Three Washington area residents were killed in the crash of the American Airlines DC-6 yesterday at Dallas.

They are:

David N. Lewis, 41, member of the War Claims Commission.

Maj. William Johnstone Small, jr., 32, of 500 Belleview dr., Falls Church, attached to the Air Installation Section, Air Force deputy chief of staff for materiel.

Jerome B. Shaw, 41, of 5054 Just st. ne., personnel manager of the Negro branch of the National Employment Service, 1708 G st. nw.

Eight others boarded the plane at Washington. Only two survived. They are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brurillo of Mexico City.

David N. Lewis

Mr. Lewis, an attorney, was a glider pilot during World War II. He saw action at Anzio, was in the break-through at Rome and during the invasion of southern France led a glider wing which landed behind the lines on D Day.

He was to have addressed a meeting of the Texas Prisoner of War Club at Dallas last night.

Mr. Lewis, in the '30s, assisted in breaking up the German-American Bund's Nazi camp in Suffolk County, New York—a job which led to the eventual prosecution and conviction of Fritz Kuhn, the German-American fuehrer.

Before joining the War Claims Commission this year, Mr. Lewis spent two years in charge of the Litigation Branch of the Office of Alien Property of the Justice Department. A native New Yorker, he attended Columbia University and the Brooklyn Law School.

His home here was at 2480 16th st. nw. He is survived by his wife.

Harry S. Kopel took the stand in his own defense yesterday in District Court and denied he ever saw gambling in his restaurant, Hammel's at 416 10th st. nw.

One hour later, Walter C. Plummer, a waiter at Hammel's, testified he took three bets there from Government investigators "to accommodate them."

Earlier, charges against the two men, were reduced by order of the court.

Truman Given Forecast of 1950 Victory

Only 'Major Mistakes' Can Bar Democratic Congress, Harding Says

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A 7000-word "personal report," giving President Truman a few candid facts about himself and the Democratic state of the Nation, may be perused by Mr. Truman at his leisure in Key West.

In a nutshell, the report advised the President that a preponderantly Democratic Congress will be his again in 1950 if he doesn't make any "major mistakes."

It measured Democratic strength against Democratic weakness in key congressional districts and concluded that the Democrats stand to pick up more seats than they lose in next November's off-year election.

Report Given by Harding

The report was handed to the President before he left for Key West by Capt. Victor Hunt Harding, executive secretary of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee for more than 12 years, and the party's 1950 "advance agent."

It was based on a 9000-mile "reconnaissance tour" through Northern, Western and border States. Traveling by auto, Harding steered clear of political big shots, talked mostly with the average Joe who decides elections.

The trip started before Congress adjourned and wound up just before the recent elections. Harding held up his report long enough to check it against actual election results, then submitted his conclusions to the President.

"Party spirit is high," he reported. "Public is friendly. Only major mistakes can prevent a substantial majority in 1950."

Man in Street Likes Him

What does the country generally think of Harry Truman? Harding put it this way to the President:

"The man on the street likes him; feels that he knows the President; and that the President is on his side. The President has no

Costello Helps Pick a Judge; Gives a Lift to Kings Ransom

Fourth Article of a Series

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Frank Costello, growing more and more powerful in New York City politics, became friendly with Michael Kennedy, who recently lost his life in a Washington plane crash which killed 55 persons. Ultimately, Costello put Kennedy over as leader of Tammany.

Now came the incident which, according to Costello, led to his present reputation.

Thomas Aurelio, a city magistrate, wanted to be a member of the State Supreme Court and sought Costello's help. Costello called on Kennedy to get him the Democratic nomination. When he heard that Kennedy was cooling off on an Italian candidate, and thinking of putting up an Irish Catholic, Costello went to him and said:

"Now you have got to be either man or mouse. Come out with it. Are you really going to go along with it? If not, declare yourself. You are the boss of Tammany Hall . . ."

Nomination Went Through

Kennedy kept his word and the Aurelio nomination went through.

Meantime, without Costello's knowledge, his telephone had been tapped. This was done under a State law authorizing the police to tap a phone if they have reason to believe that it might lead to evidence of a crime. The police got something, but not what they were after.

The day after Aurelio was nominated, the following conversation was heard over the tapped wire:

Aurelio—"Good morning, Francesco, how are you and thanks for everything."

Costello—"Congratulations, it went over perfect. When I tell you something is in the bag, you can rest assured."

There was some more talk about the nomination and Costello said they must get together soon. Then came a sensational remark:

Aurelio—"That would be fine. But right now I want to assure you of my loyalty for all you have done. It's undying."

District Attorney Frank Hogan made public the conversation. A grand jury investigation followed, but Aurelio nonetheless was elected. He also survived disbarment proceedings and now sits in the State Supreme Court.

Costello, in talking about this at our luncheon meeting, said his only motive was to help a deserving candidate, an Italian, a World War I veteran, a man with a nice wife and kids.

He said pretty much the same thing when he testified at the disbarment proceedings, held before the Supreme Court. He also said then that he had been trying to "mix with the better people, the highest type." He knew many of "the finest and biggest businessmen in the coun-

Prince Georges Master Zoning Plan Approved

3-Year Effort Crowned By Commissioners' Unanimous Backing

The Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners last night unanimously approved the long-proposed master zoning plan for the nearby Maryland county.

The action, putting into immediate effect revised and simplified county zoning regulations, followed a public hearing in the County Service Building in Hyattsville, Md., at which nearly 200 citizens overwhelmingly backed the proposal.

The ordinance, in preparation and pushed the past three years by the National Capital-Maryland Park and Planning Commission, establishes 11 zoning classifications instead of the present five.

Zoning Never Imposed

Chief effect of the change will be the actual zoning of the fringe areas outside the metropolitan district where zoning is now authorized but has never been imposed.

County planning officials emphasized last night the new zoning board is "substantially the same" as the one now in effect, and that applications for rezoning must still win approval of the Commissioners.

The ordinance will permit construction of two and three-family row apartment units, and divides industrial and commercial zoning classifications into light and heavy types.

To Guide Commission

Provision is also made for the zoning of planned communities such as Greenbelt and Langley Park in one operation.

Under the ordinance a zoning plan adopted by NC-MPPC will continue as a master plan to guide

Lewis Is Silent

Coal Strike Decision Due By Midnight

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis, two days late for his own policy committee meeting, left for New York yesterday evening, the big secret safely reposed under his hat.

Will there be another strike of some 380,000 soft coal miners at 12:01 a. m Thursday?

Only the mystery-loving John L. knows the answer, and he won't say.

It's just possible that Lewis will let go of the secret at a meeting of his 200-man UMW policy committee in New York at 4 p. m. today.

The meeting was called for Monday. The 200 committee members showed up, but Lewis remained—mysteriously—in Washington. He sent word late Monday that he'd appear for the meeting on Tuesday, but yesterday again the boss of the Nation's miners failed—mysteriously—to show up.

In the evening, Lewis took off from Washington for New York. He had no comment, official or otherwise. Government, industry, and public alike were left to specu-

Former Secretary Made Disclosures, FBI Agent Testifies

Charges that Representative J. Parnell Thomas placed a bedridden 71-year-old aunt and a daughter-in-law on his congressional payroll, although they did no work, were aired at the New Jersey Republican's fraud trial yesterday.

FBI Agent Frederick Vechery told a District Court jury that Miss Helen Campbell, Thomas' 64-year-old former secretary and his co-defendant on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government, made these disclosures in an interview with the FBI last year.

The 71-year-old invalid, who was said to have drawn Government pay for several months, was identified by Vechery as Mrs. Grace Wilson, an aunt of Thomas' by marriage, and the daughter-in-law as Mrs. Lillian Thomas of Allendale, N. J.

Two signed statements made by Miss Campbell to the FBI were identified and made available to counsel but withheld from evidence.

Attacked Near Ice Plant

Slugging Fatal to Engineer In Alexandria; Pay Missing

An Alexandria refrigeration engineer was robbed and fatally slugged yesterday morning only 20 feet from the Mutual Ice Co. plant in Alexandria where he was a crew foreman.

The robbery victim, Raymond Bryant Dodson, 49, formerly of 404 E. Bellefonte ave., Alexandria, died at 5:15 p. m. at Alexandria Hospital.

He had been found unconscious nearly 10 hours earlier outside the ice plant, which is on the N. Payne st. extension in Alexandria.

His attacker or attackers had left him with a fractured skull and a possible broken neck. Physicians said he had also suffered from exposure.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, chief of Alexandria detectives, said he believed Dodson had been struck only once, with an automobile axle or a crowbar, both found nearby.

His family disclosed that Dodson had been slugged once before on the ice plant premises on August 30, 1946, with robbery as an apparent motive.

Alexandria Hospital records for August, 1946, show that Dodson was treated for an "egg shell" skull fracture, which physicians said was probably caused by a blunt instrument.

At 7:20 a. m. yesterday, Jesse Pinkston, 729 Fairfax st., Alexandria, who holds Dodson's job on a later shift, found him alongside his auto, parked near the plant's engine room.

Police said $74.80, Dodson's weekly pay which he received the night before, was missing. The man's pockets contained only 13 cents.

Near the car were an automobile axle, a crowbar and several blood-spattered valves from oxygen tanks. Car keys were found close to the auto, indicating Dodson may have been attacked as he was preparing to enter it.

Police said Dodson went to work about 4 p. m. Monday and paid his four-man crew their week's salary. He was relieved by Pinkston about midnight and left the plant at 12:20 a. m. Pinkston said no one in the plant heard noise of a scuffle.

Chungking Near Fall to Reds; Chiang May Take Command

Hongkong, Nov. 29 (AP).—Gunfire today tolled the last days—perhaps the last hours—of Chungking's reign as the third capital of Nationalist China within a year.

But its loss may mean the return of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to the Nationalist Presidency.

The reports coincided with arrival of five American Senators and six Representatives in Hongkong. The group is touring the Orient to study needs for possible American aid. All said they opposed immediate recognition of Red China by the United States or Britain.

Nationalist dispatches declared Chiang was still in Chungking late today, personally directing its defense. Acting President Li Tsung-jen, who has clashed with Chiang repeatedly, was reported planning to leave Hongkong for the United States for "personal reasons." The State Department in Washington announced the trip has been authorized.

Nationalist headquarters at Taipeh, Formosa, said Communist troops reached the south bank of the Yangtze opposite Chungking this morning. It said the spearhead had been thrown back by crack troops rushed from northern Szechwan.

But passengers on the "last plane" out of Chungking told reporters here the Reds have moved in close enough to level rifle fire at their loading chartered Chinese transport. No one was injured. Luggage and some passengers were left behind.

Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa said gunfire could be heard across the Yangtze. It was rumored that the Communists would by-pass Chungking.

Moosa said there were two divisions of government troops to be withdrawn tonight. After that, it was rumored a telephone message will invite the Reds to come in.

Gen. Quesada Heads Task Force; Graves Chosen Top AEC Officer on Project

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission jointly announced last night that they were planning "a new series of tests of atomic weapons" at Eniwetok, the atomic proving grounds in the Marshall Islands.

Since atomic weapons and everything about them have the highest secrecy classification, not even the time of the test was divulged in the announcement.

Nor was there any indication of how many atomic bombs would be exploded, what kind they were, or why the experimentation was being done.

It could be assumed only that some new or improved devices had been developed since the last tests at Eniwetok, 18 months ago. Since three "weapons" were tested then, it seems evident that the AEC and military services have something new to try out.

It also seems likely that the tests will not take place for some months, perhaps not until next spring. The late series at Eniwetok involved a task force of 10,000 men. It took a long period to organize the operation.

The task force in charge of the projected tests will be headed by Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, who has been for the last year a special assistant to the Air Chief of Staff for Reserve Forces. During the war he was commander of the Ninth Fighter Command, which supplied air cover over the Normandy landings and the campaign through France.

The AEC's top officer on the tests is to be Dr. Alvin C. Graves of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory. That installation is the AEC's weapons laboratory.

Text of Announcement

The joint announcement declared:

"The Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission have advised the President that a new series of tests of atomic weapons is planned at the Commission's Proving Ground at Eniwetok Atoll in the Marshall Islands.

"Full security restrictions as required by the Atomic Energy Act apply to all aspects of test preparations, including the time of the tests.

"As in past atomic weapons test projects, the field operations will be carried out by a Joint Task Force, composed of personnel of Army, Navy, Air Force, and the Atomic Energy Commission. Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, USAF, will command Joint Task Force-3, which has been formed to carry out the new test program. General Quesada will have as deputies, Brig. Gen. Herbert Loper, Army, Rear Admiral Tom B. Hill, Navy, and Dr. Alvin C. Graves of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory. Chief of Staff is Brig. Gen. John K. Gerhart, USAF.

"The commission recently announced a contract with Holmes and Narver, Los Angeles engineering and construction firm, for maintenance and improvement of facilities at the Eniwetok Proving Ground. Military and Naval units participating in the current work at the Proving Ground will be a part of Joint Task Force-3."

Eight Atom Explosions by U. S.

The constantly guarded, secret "outdoor laboratory" of Eniwetok Atoll is in the South Pacific, about 5000 miles from San Francisco. The earlier tests there, called "Operation Sandstone," were conducted by a task force that was assembled in Hawaii. It left there without any advance notice.

Since the atomic bomb was developed, eight of them have been exploded by Americans, as follows:

First test bomb at Alamogordo, N. Mex., July 16, 1945.

Wartime attacks in Hiroshima, Japan, August 6, second attack on Nagasaki August 8, 1945.

Fire Funds Found Intact, Chief Says

Slipshod Bookkeeping Blamed For Mixup Over 'Missing' $7000

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew yesterday reported that more than $7000 allegedly missing from five firemen's organizations has been found.

He attributed the mixup to "slipshod" bookkeeping.

The Commissioners accepted Mayhew's recommendation that no further action be taken, and the chief declared the matter closed.

Mayhew told a reporter last night that "the board which investigated the supposed shortage found it was all due to the mishandling of books by a number of persons."

The board appointed to investigate the matter had recommended no further action, Mayhew said, "because so many persons had been handling the money it was impossible to tell who was at fault."

"It was a shipshod handling of books," the chief said, "but there was no misappropriation of funds. All the money was found."

Shortages allegedly totaling from $7000 to $7500 were reported in the funds of the following organizations: Firemen's Retirement Club, Firemen's Relief Association, Firemen's Family Relief, No. 3 Engine Company Christmas Club and Firefighters Local No. 36, AFL.

The investigating board included Deputy Chiefs P. A. Davis and M. H. Sutton and Battalion Chief C. P. Pool.

Mayhew said the organizations which have assets of about $500,000 "didn't have any real system of bookkeeping at all."

"When the man who regularly collected dues was off, they'd just throw the money in a drawer and it might sit there for a few days," Mayhew said.

A system of handling money has now been instituted under the supervision of the auditing firm of Stoy & Stoy, Mayhew added. Under the new procedure, he said, only designated persons are allowed to collect money, and funds are banked daily.

Unseat Tito, Is World Call Of Cominform

'International Duty' Of Worker Stressed; Catholic Aid Sought

Moscow, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Cominform enjoined Communists everywhere today to back an all-out effort to unseat Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito. It called, too, for a decisive struggle against Titoists in the party ranks.

The Cominform is a Communist information bureau, in which the Communist parties of eight nations are represented.

Far from yielding to any qualms of national Communist elements, the Cominform demanded strict discipline everywhere. It declared it was the "international duty" of all Communists to aid to the utmost those Yugoslav workers fighting for a resurrection of orthodox Communist doctrine in Yugoslavia.

Seeks Catholics' aid

It also adopted a combat program "for peace," in which Communists were urged to make a special effort to enlist the aid of Catholic workers and other groups.

The order was adopted at a secret meeting this month in Hungary, the newspaper Pravda announced.

Prominent in the text of the resolutions was the statement that it would be misleading to assume the threat of a new war has diminished.

(Dispatches from the Czechoslovak capital, Prague, said publication of the resolutions there led to speculation a secret decision might have been taken for direct armed action of some sort.)

Developments Cited

The Cominform charged that, under Tito, Belgrade has become the nerve center of a counter-revolutionary movement against the Communist countries as well as of American espionage and anti-Communist propaganda.

It cited the Marshall Plan, formation of the North Atlantic Pact, the "impetuous armaments race in the United States" and refusal of the "Anglo-American bloc" to prohibit atomic weapons (meaning refusal of the Western powers to accept Russia's control plan) as proof of this.

D. C. Community Chest Drive Reaches 80 Percent of Goal

Greater Washington's Community Chest drive yesterday advanced to 80.11 per cent of its goal of $3,991,719.

New contributions of $85,068.68 announced at a report luncheon at the Washington Hotel brought the Red Feather drive total to $3,197,859.56, or $793,859.56 short of the 1950 goal.

Frank J. Luchs, general campaign chairman, expressed thanks to the 312,976 Washingtonians who have contributed to the Chest drive, but said that "there must be nearly 200,000 other gainfully employed people in this Washington area who might have a part in this campaign if we can reach them."

Nearest to achieving its goal in the drive is the Government unit, which reported an additional $22,317.55 for 90.24 percent of its quota of $1,585,411.

Second to the Government unit is the Alexandria section, which yesterday climbed to 90.03 percent of its $67,288 goal.

Other new pledges reported: Arlington, $6210.30, for a total of $38,552.28 or 63.31 percent; Montgomery County, $9325.41 for a total of $65,107.19 or 47.87 percent; Residential, $6949.40 for a total of $251,617.76 or 75.93 percent; Business Unit I, $33,107.07 or 75.88 percent; Business Unit II, $4761.83 or 65.56 percent.

Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, residential unit chairman, presented Red Feather "Oscars" to representatives of two organizations for outstanding work.

They were Mrs. Isadore Rodis, the Council of Jewish Women, and Mrs. J. E. Loh, representing women of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Washington.

An Oscar was also given to Robert Brownell and Ralph M. Bogart of the insurance firm of Bogart & Brownell, 1424 K st. nw., for their work in soliciting for Business Unit I.

Business Unit II will meet today in the mural room of the Washington Hotel at 12:20 p. m. for a report luncheon. On Thursday at 12:20 p. m. the Government unit will meet in the Washington room for a report and Business Units I and II and the county units will meet in the mural room to report on latest drive gains.

28 Die in Dallas Airliner Crash

with chemicals. Both buildings burned and the sky was colored brilliantly as chemicals flamed in the latter building, the Magnaflux plant.

It was the worst plane crash in Texas history.

Dazed and bleeding, a crew member staggered 100 feet to a row of houses, collapsed on a front porch, and said, "I think I am dying and I want to make a statement. The plane was on fire and I cut all four engines. The engines were off when we hit."

The flight engineer of the plane, William S. Forbes, said the crew member was Robert E. Lewis, 30, of Tulsa, Okla., the copilot. Lewis was among the survivors.

Pilot Tells Story

Capt. Laurens (Tommy) Claude of Fort Worth, who was at the controls, said one engine failed and was feathered (stopped) over Altheimer, Ark. Nearing Love Field, he said, "I squared away to make a landing with flaps and gear down on a final approach. The No. 4 engine quit and I called to the flight engineer to cut on the booster pump when the fuel flow dropped to zero and the left wing dropped after the plane started to mush in (below flying speed).

"I called for flaps and gear up to the first officer. With only two engines working there wasn't much power to gain altitude to climb.

"He (the first officer) called out: 'She's a goner!'

"As he said that, the plane hit the hangar and burst into flames."

Claude escaped through a baggage hatch.

Lieut. Col. A. F. S. Fane, a British King's messenger, en route to Mexico City and Guatemala from Washington on an official mission, was among the dead. So was Mrs. Ernest G. Wadel of Dallas, national chairman of the women's division of the United Jewish Appeal, and David N. Lewis, former attorney for the Department of Justice, Office of Alien Property, Washington. Another was Jose de la Mora of Guadalajara, Mexico, a director of the Mexican Aviation Co.

Dr. Luis de la Rosa, president of the Mexican National Chamber of Broadcasting, survived.

Justice of the Peace Pierce McBride said he had viewed 28 bodies, those of 17 men and 11 women. American Airlines listed 41 passengers and a crew of five. Two of the crew were killed.

Three survivors were a mother and father and their infant child. Crying for help, they rushed their bleeding baby to aid.

One wing of the airliner, with two crumpled engines, held together. It lay against the side of the Magnaflux plant. The other wing was a black stub with the burned-out shell on one engine. The fourth engine tore loose as the flaming plane swept across the top of the Dallas Aviation School.

Hundreds of spectators burst through an area blockade of police and State patrolmen. Ropes held them away from the tragic scene. Fires blazed more than an hour. Then firemen toiled over the blackened, twisted fuselage, wet and glistening in the glare of portable floodlights.

Crash Victim Had Foreboding

J. Quincy Corbett, who was killed in the Dallas air crash, had "a foreboding that something would happen" and kept telling his Washington niece: "I hope this rain keeps up, Pat, so the plane won't take off."

The niece, Mrs. Pat Cooper, 35, of 5224 Massachusetts ave. nw., said her uncle kept having her 'phone the airport here to check on flying conditions.

His foreboding, Mrs. Cooper said, had nothing to do with a desire to stay over in Washington—"he had been away from home quite awhile and needed to get back." He had done a large amount of flying but this time, she said, he had a feeling "that he wouldn't get home all right."

Corbett, a 56-year-old millionaire cattle and oil man from Breckinridge, Tex., had scores of friends in Washington, Mrs. Cooper said. He is survived by his wife and four children.

Purchase by the Corcoran Gallery of Art of seven paintings shown in the fourth annual area exhibition was announced yesterday by Hermann Warner Williams, jr., gallery director.

Williams said response of collectors has been "lively." The exhibition will continue until December 18 and the majority of paintings are for sale.

The seven paintings were purchased, Williams said, through aid of individuals and merchants who contributed to a fund for this purpose.

Two Patients Believed Dying Saved With New 'Mycin' Drug

Philadelphia, Nov. 29 (U.P.). — A new drug which promises hope to victims of infectious diseases has been used successfully for the first time on human beings, it was announced today.

The drug, called Neomycin, saved the lives of two patients dying of an infection of the urinary tract, Pennsylvania Hospital doctors said. Both were reported cured. Neither showed any toxic effects.

Dr. Garfield G. Duncan, who administered the new drug to human beings for the first time, said it holds promise of surpassing, in one important respect, the other wonder drugs—aureomycin, streptomycin, chloromycin, penicillin.

"Neomycin destroys organisms which tend to become resistant to the other drugs, Dr. Duncan said.

He explained that some infectious organisms develop a resistance to the other drugs. The patient may suffer a recurrence.

The drug, produced from a soil microbe called Streptomyces Fradiae, has been used experimentally since its discovery earlier this year by Dr. Selman Waksman and his assistant, Hubert Lechevalier, at Rutgers University. Dr. Waksman also discovered streptomycin.

Widow Says Dancer Had Spirit Influence Over Her Husband

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—Warm love letters between the late Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen and a British dancer were read aloud today in a damage suit against the girl by his American widow.

Also into the record went an account of purported messages from the spirit world which Lady Maurencia Cunliffe-Owen says were used by the dancer, Marjorie Daw, to break up her marriage with the tobacco tycoon.

The titled widow, who once ran a Fifth ave. dress shop in New York, sued on charges of libel and enticement. Enticement in British law is equivalent to alienation of affections in the United States.

Cunliffe-Owen was president of the British-American Tobacco Co. When he died in 1947, at the age of 77, he had been separated from Lady Cunliffe-Owen for a year. A month before he died, Miss Daw had her name changed legally to Cunliffe-Owen. She is in her 30s.

Sir Hugo left the dancer half of his $3,790,000 estate and an income from the other half.

Ousted Deputy Sues Fay, 2 Assistants

Donald S. Foster, 41, yesterday filed a $75,000 damage suit against the three officials he said caused him to be suspended from his deputy marshal's post after his testimony in the William (Snags) Lewis gambling trial.

Foster, 15 years a marshal's deputy, charged his civil rights were violated and that he was publicly vilified because of the suspension.

The defendants are George Morris Fay, the United States Attorney who began the investigation of the gaming racket here; United States Marshal Bruce Matthews, Foster's superior, and Salvatore Andretta, Supervisor of United States Marshals.

The suit asks a mandamus ordering him restored to duty and also $25,000 damages from each of the defendants.

In the Lewis case, Foster was called by one of the 14 defendants to rebut testimony given by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly.

The prosecutor had testified that one defendant admitted being in the numbers game. Foster said, however, that he was in the room during the interview and that no such statement was made.

Foster was then placed on annual leave against his will, he charges. Now, he has been notified by Andretta, he said, that he will be suspended during an investigation.

The suit says Fay induced Matthews and Andretta to suspend him. Foster said he was duty-bound to testify for the defense because he was under subpena.

Fay and Andretta immediately denied the charge.

$83,000 Budget Approved For D. C. Alcoholic Clinic

The Commissioners paved the way yesterday for an early opening of the Alcoholic Clinic by approving an $83,000 budget for it.

However, Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director, said it probably will be the end of the year before the clinic goes into fulltime operation. It will take about a month, he said, to clear up legal details and complete the staff.

The clinic will operate at the Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw., where a part-time Health Department clinic is now set up. Dr. Wexberg said he expects the new clinic to handle 300 or 400 active cases. He can now take care of about 50.

Authorized by Congress in 1947, the clinic will be financed partly by funds received from liquor licenses. Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger told the Commissioners that although the budget he submitted exceeded estimated annual receipts by $11,000, the fund has reached nearly $110,000.

The act provides that Municipal Court judges may commit chronic alcoholics to the clinic for not more than 90 days of treatment.

Before the courts may start this procedure, however, the Commissioners "shall certify to the Municipal Court . . . the extent to which proper and adequate treatment facilities and personnel have been provided . . ."

It is this certification which Dr. Wexberg hopes may be made by the end of the year. Meantime, he said, the clinic will continue its present schedule of working with voluntary patients three days a week.

District Cabbies Gripe Most at Buses, Trolleys, Trucks

as there are drivers; some of them think the Capital Transit Co. exerts too much influence on the traffic department; most of them wish pedestrians would be more considerate in walking and in waiting for cabs; all will agree that something must be done about Washington traffic conditions.

Before the complaint session got under way, Keneipp reminded the hackers that the meeting couldn't discuss matters outside his jurisdiction. This eliminated changes in fares, zone charges, the airport controversy and the hackers board as "gripe" subjects.

With these admonitions up rose Stephen J. Johnson, independent operator and a member of the Premier Cab Association.

He declared that buses, streetcars and trucks are the "three worst offenders in the city." He said buses operating on the H st.-Benning rd. line are "turning on red lights with no regard for other traffic."

"When they cut me off I feel like beating their brains in. One day I'm going to jerk a couple of them out and work them over. Why don't the police get after them?"

Johnson had other complaints:

"Maryland trucks speed up and down Pennsylvania ave. like they were going to a fire. On Constitution ave. they speed up and down like crazy. I'm going to jerk one of them out, too, one of these days. If I do," he said to his audience, "I want you guys to help me out. I don't scare easy," said Johnson, "but they've scared me sometimes. I'm not going to take it any more."

Is a Police Matter

Keneipp pointed out that law enforcement regulation was a matter for the police.

Joseph R. Moore, an independent cab driver, stated:

"Under present conditions in the District, I think the director of traffic has done a great job. I think we should all give the director a big hand."

They did. Not so cheerful was Charles F. Blanks, a Veterans cab driver. His question was:

"Doesn't Capital Transit Co. have a lot of influence in the timing of lights in some parts of town?"

"No sir," said Keneipp. "We've got to consider the whole traffic picture. A lot of people ride streetcars but I wouldn't give the streetcars any more credit than pedestrians in my office."

John Rogers Peters, a Blue Light driver, told those at the Armory meeting:

"This meeting is five years late, and it isn't Mr. Keneipp's fault. There has been constant discrimination in this city by city officials against the cab drivers, in various regulations of the PUC and in regulations in general. There has been favoritism for Capital Transit Co. and general abuse of cab drivers.

Take the Pedestrians

"Now you take the pedestrians," said Peters. "There are laws on our statute books for pedestrians but they are not being enforced. This is slowing down traffic of all kinds. Pedestrians are crossing in the middle of the square. They are jay-walking. They are getting into cabs at streetcar loading platforms. All these are factors in slowing down traffic.

"But the cab drivers are always being kicked in the stomach by city officials. It's a good thing, for some people, that we don't have the vote in this grand city of so-called free enterprise; and I won't say a thing about the airport situation," Peters said.

Edwin C. Hammerly, an independent owner in the Washington Cab Association, had some suggestions to make about Northwest Washington congestion, particularly Dupont Circle, which he called "a blunderpass, that 1975 project." He thought 21st street should be made one-way northbound, and 22d street, one-way southbound.

Crossing his wrists, he showed how, under the existing situation, drivers must cross congested avenues twice, in the Massachusetts and Florida ave. areas.

By changing one-way designations, Hammerly said, "You eliminate the doublecross."

No Real Traffic Director

"We don't really have a traffic director in Washington," he continued. "If we had a traffic director in Washington who wasn't interfered with by other regulations and other people; if we could put all traffic under one head—brother, he could really do a job!"

William A. Cooke, a Lincoln Cab driver, had a complaint about cabs with passengers for the ball park or amusement areas such as the Uline Arena. He said that at present, police are closing off traffic in the immediate area, so that cabs must discharge passengers one or two blocks away.

"That way," he said, "the passenger gets mad before he gets out of the cab. He don't want to pay you no way. If you make him mad enough, he's certainly not going to pay you much."

Benjamin M. Posey, a Diamond Cab driver and one of the last to speak at the hearing, said:

"I've heard all this discussion on traffic in Washington and I think the traffic director is doing a wonderful job. If all the people and all the cab drivers would abide by the regulations, there wouldn't be any trouble. It seems like the cab drivers want everybody to step out and let them have their own way."

Irving Miller, a former cab driver who spoke at the session, declared at its end, that "This has been a very good bit of time very well wasted. Years have gone by with no actual satisfaction on traffic problems. I'll apologize within a year from now if there are any improvements."

See a Lot of Things

Keneipp, in starting out the meeting, said he had called it because "Some of the best suggestions I've had for improving traffic have come from you men, who drive over half a million miles per day over the District . . . You fellows see a lot of things I wouldn't see. The purpose of this meeting is to give you an opportunity to tell me . . . I want to say I regard you fellows as friends, not enemies. We don't always agree, but then you don't always agree with your wife, either."

Later, he reminded the cab drivers, "The major percentage of all the complaints we get on hackers have to do with courtesy. A wee bit of trying to get along with the guy or the lady in the cab would have saved you getting called before the board."

Keneipp said Washington has been "pretty badly messed up" by four major highway projects during the past two years, and that many more such projects are badly needed.

He drew vigorous applause when he stated "We need another bridge across the Anacostia River."

Other projects he listed as gravely needed included a replacement for the present Highway Bridge, another bridge, eventually, across the Potomac River to Virginia; an improvement of Military rd. as an access road through the park; the Arizona ave. Freeway, which would permit a car to travel from Tenley Circle to Constitution avenue without stopping.

Making K st. an expressway from Washington Circle to 6th st. by depressing K st., a grade separation at Minnesota ave. and Benning rd., which Keneipp termed a "nightmare;" a "major operation" at 15th and H sts. ne., which has the city's worst accident record.

Plaza Situation Unsatisfactory

Keneipp said he also is "not satisfied" with the situation at Union Station Plaza, and added he believed the Rock Creek Parkway should be extended to Western avenue. The cab dribers echoed this, but shouted this parkway should be extended even farther—to East-West Highway.

After outlining these traffic needs, Keneipp asked the cab drivers to show which projects they thought should have the highest priority. Most voted for the Anacostia River bridge. Others voted for improvement of the Benning rd.-Minnesota ave. project.

Among specific questions posed on traffic problems in the city was that of Louis Macklin, a Yellow Cab driver, who asked:

"Why not have blinking lights on streetcar loading platforms? On narrow streets we can't get through, and on rainy or snowy nights we may run over these platforms unconsciously."

Keneipp pointed out that the platform illumination is subject to PUC regulation, and that installation of underground conduits which would permit blinking lights would be very expensive.

Dominic Angelotto, a Diamond Cab driver, suggested a course of education for pedestrians.

"Why can't we give out folders to people asking them to wait for a cab in the middle of the block, rather than on a corner, which is not a safe place?"

Keneipp agreed that some sort of educational program would be worth while.

Would Speed Up Slow Ones

Jack C. Collins, an independent driver in the Premier Cab Association, said:

"I'd like to know why we can't speed up slow drivers, the men who drive at 10 to 15 miles per hour in the center lane, and won't move over, or who straddle lanes."

Keneipp said a recent regulation for the first time defines too-slow driving as a traffic violation, and that the police now have power to arrest slow drivers.

Samuel Watson, an independent, wanted to know if it would be possible to make L st. one-way west from 12th st. to Pennsylvania to take some of the traffic off Washington Circle.

Keneipp pointed out that if L st. is made one-way, another bordering street must be made one-way in the opposite direction. He said there was no bordering street which could be so changed.

Sidney Cohen, an independent driver, wanted to know "why you have to take a blood test every year in order to get your license renewed?"

Herman S. Cole, administrative officer in the vehicles and traffic department, said this was required to meet the "mentally, morally and physically fit" standards set by legislation for cab drivers.

Mrs. Jessie Joe Mathis, driver with the Bell Cab Co. and only woman to speak at the session, wanted to know "Why don't buses pull to the curb when they take on passengers?" She also wanted to know why 'no left turn' signs were not removed when they were supposed to be. Keneipp told her these were police matters.

Angelo Grasso, Eagle Cab driver, pointed out that it is impossible to make a right turn at most F st. intersections, and suggested a light on which all pedestrians could walk, in order to speed up turns.

Would Lengthen Cycle

Keneipp pointed out this would lengthen the 90-second signal light cycle in Washington, already regarded as longer than the average.

Norman L. Pulliam, another Eagle driver, said he had been told by a Baltimorean that a man with a cab and a license has a $7000 property. Yet in Washington, he pointed out, if a man gets two or three tickets—"One, two three . . . and out goes a cab driver" before the revocations board. "He's just a little guy," said Pulliam. "Why do they have to hit him twice?"

Thurmond A. Veasey, an independent cab driver, asked if a traffic light would be justified at 17th and Maryland ave. ne. He said that during rush hours, a car must wait "the timing of three or four lights" to get through. Wallace L. Braun, deputy director of traffic, said the intersection was being studied by his engineers.

Gordon Wright, a Yellow Cab driver, asked if something couldn't be done to relieve congestion at Atlantic ave. and S. Capitol st. se., where a food store entrance and exit are causing traffic congestion. He was told the project was under official consideration.

Richard Hogue, a driver for Yellow Cab, wanted to know why motorcycle police couldn't be trained to handle slow traffic so that it could be kept in the curb lane. He was reminded that this was a matter for the police department.

Richard Booth, a Yellow Cab driver, wanted to know if something couldn't be done about delivery trucks, which tie up traffic daily. "You can't see around them, and you can't go anywhere." Keneipp said he thought the time was coming when commercial establishments must provide their own loading docks, just as there will have to be off-street bus terminals.

Keneipp, who had planned to end the hearing at noon, extended it until nearly 12:30 when some drivers in the audience shouted they would be willing to "stay all day" in order to get a chance to be heard.

BENJAMIN POSEY, Diamond cab driver: "If cab drivers and people would abide by the rules . . ."

JOSEPH MOORE, in cab fleet: "I think the traffic director has done a great job . . . let's give him a hand"

LOUIS MACKLIN, with Yellow Cab fleet: "How about having blinking lights on loading platforms"

ANGELO GRASSO, Eagle Cab Company: "They should give more tickets to pedestrians"

JESSIE MATHIS, lady driver with Bell Cab: "Why don't buses pull to curb when they take passengers?"

NORMAN PULLIAM, Eagle Cab Company: "one, two, three and out goes a cab driver on two tickets"

STEPHEN JOHNSON, independent cab owner: "Buses, street cars and trucks are the three worse offenders . . ."

RICHARD HOGE, of Yellow Cab: "Why can't police patrol main streets and keep slow traffic to right?"

GORDON WRIGHT, Yellow Cab: "... there's a food store that has an entrance and exit ... causing lots of confusion"

JACK C. COLLINS, independent driver with Premier Cab Association: "Why can't we speed up slow drivers?"

SAMUEL WATSON, independent cabbie: "... lights all run together at 4th and Constitution and Pennsylvania. Can't one light be delayed?"

JOHN PETERS, Blue Light Cab driver and former union president: "Cab drivers are always being pushed in the stomach ..."

DOMINIC ANGELOTTO, Diamond Cab driver: "People expect a cab to stop any place ... at an intersection, in the middle of street"

THURMAN VEASEY, independent hacker: "The intersection at 17th and Maryland ne. gives you a lot of trouble"

CHARLES BLANKS, of the Veterans Cab Association: "Doesn't Capital Transit have quite an influence on timing of lights in some parts of town?"

IRVING MILLER, former Diamond Cab driver: "We're here to voice our views ... what about holes in the street, why can't plates be placed over them?"

Marine Denies Impropriety

The second-degree murder trial of Clarence W. Robertson, 34, accused of slaying his estranged wife, opened in District Court yesterday with a Marine private denying he had had improper relations with Mrs. Robertson.

The Marine, Everett Flagg, 23, of Quantico, was wounded by two shots fired by Robertson, March 20, when Mrs. Lucille Robertson was slain.

Flagg testified he had been visiting Mrs. Robertson at her home, 1125 11th st. nw., with three other persons present, when Robertson, a truck driver, appeared.

The witness said Robertson opened fire on the Marine and Mrs. Robertson as they sat on the divan with two other persons nearby.

Size Limit on Life Insurance Firms Proposed

By the United Press

The possibility of a Government limit on the size of insurance companies was raised yesterday by a life insurance company executive.

William Montgomery, head of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., told a House Judiciary Subcommittee on monopoly that it may be necessary to prevent the concentration of too much of the Nation's investment funds in a few corporations.

"If insurance companies go along at the present ratio of increase in size," he said, "it is only a matter of time until they have all the investment income in the country."

He said such concentration is "unhealthy" and that some form of size limitation may be "inevitable."

Other insurance company executives who appeared before the subcommittee disagreed sharply.

James Fulton, president of the Home Life Insurance Co., New York, said attempts to limit the size of the companies would be "highly detrimental to the welfare of the people."

C. G. Coley, vice president of the Durham Life Insurance Co., Raleigh, N. C., said there is nothing unhealthy in the concentration of assets in big companies as long as they are "properly managed."

L. Douglas Meredith, vice president of the National Life Insurance Co., Vermont, blamed Federal of life insurance.

12 Western Nations Forge Defense Plan

Paris, Nov. 29 (AP).—Military chiefs of the 12 nations of the North Atlantic Pact agreed today on the broad outlines of a defense plan.

The plan will be presented Thursday.

United Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson reiterated that there never was any plan for rearming western Germany.

He said in London that the danger of war had lessened, "but not to the extent that the security of my country does not demand that we be ready for any eventuality at 4 o'clock in the morning."

Here he said:

"We have no desire or plan to permit the rebuilding of the armed forces of western Germany. We are simply trying to restore the fruits of German efforts and ingenuity to their power place in the world."

He said the statement was issued "lest any uninformed friend or vicious saboteur seek to spread a notion as to our attitude toward Germany that would divide our common efforts."

A high military source said the defense plan "is complete as far as the technical level is concerned."

"It is an encouraging plan, one designed to make the Western world ready to defend itself. I believe its existence will mean there will be no aggression at all."

The plan outlines the respective roles of each nation.

Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff; British Fleet Admiral Lord Fraser, and Gen. Charles Lecheres, chairman of the French joint chiefs, met for three hours yesterday. Today they met with the military representatives of the other nine nations.

Johnson said in London that the contributions of nations other than Britain and the United States would amount to between five and six billion dollars.

He said atomic energy would not be discussed in Paris and that Britain had not asked the United States to shoulder any of her defense commitments.

Labor Group Near Breakup Over Snub

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—A bitter row over the snubbing of millions of west European Catholic union leaders threatened tonight to break up the budding Anti-Communist Free World Labor Confederation.

Catholic unions from Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Denmark and Luxembourg were not invited to the conference. This precipitated the behind-scenes row.

There was a strong indication that Moscow and the Cominform were fully aware of the possibilities. The Cominform, in a statement released in Moscow today, openly appealed for recruiting of Catholic workers in the Communist labor movements.

Threatens to Quit

The row in the conference here became so hot that Italian labor leader Guiulio Pastore was reported threatening to withdraw his organization, the Libera Confederazione Generale Deio Laboratori, unless the excluded Catholics are asked to join.

Responsibility for the exclusion was laid to the conference preparatory committee, which invited Catholic workers only from France. The commiteemen declined to discuss the matter.

New Atomic Weapons Test To Be Conducted at Eniwetok

bomb test on June 30 and an underwater explosion on July 25, 1946.

Eniwetok tests of "three atomic weapons" during April and May, 1948.

As far as can be determined, there has been only one further detonation of an atomic bomb, that by the Russians, probably sometime early last September.

The three "weapons" tested in 1948 at Eniwetok have been described frequently, but unofficially, as "incomparably" superior to those used against Japan and at Bikini. Officially, President Truman said of the Eniwetok tests only that "our position in the field of atomic weapons has been improved substantially."

It is logical to suppose that those bombs, and the ones to be tested in the forthcoming series, contain much improved "gadgetry" and many modifications in design. But it is highly unlikely that their fuel, the atomic explosive, is anything but fissionable varieties of uranium or plutonium.

If this is true, then such "improvements" as there may be doubtless come from designs or devices that consume a larger amount of the explosive, or else from new bombs containing a larger charge in the first place.

The wartime bombs, it has been officially stated, consumed only a fraction of 1 percent of the atomic fuel. The reason is that the explosion in its first fraction of a second blew the explosive material apart, so that the amounts in close juxtaposition fell below the "critical size." At any level below the critical size, no chain reaction—i.e., explosion—will take place.

So the problem has been, it would seem, to devise a "damper," or something to hold the mixture together for a longer time, just a few more fractions of a second, probably. If this were to be accomplished, then more of the fuel would be consumed and a greater blast would result.

Gladys Swarthout Delights Audience in Song Recital

By Paul Hume

Gladys Swarthout gets better all the time.

Not only does she keep her voice in the finest estate, but she uses it on the most interesting music. She never sings a song which is not beautiful. One might ask for songs of greater profundity but even that would seem quibbling.

From Miss Swarthout's stunning appearance, it is hard to believe that she made her Metropolitan debut 20 years ago this month.

Fine Opening Group

Her recital last night in Constitution Hall brought out the first vocal music by Vivaldi I have ever heard. It was a worthy, though brief item. Surrounded by Handel and Rossini, it added to a rewarding opening group.

Vocally Miss Swarthout seemed to warm up a bit slowly last night. It was not until her second set of songs, drawn from Franco-Italian folk lore, that the beautiful singer reached her usual easy delivery.

These songs were among the finest of the concert. Songs of the Auvergne country, including the ditty about the man who is happy because he has no wife, went with tender warmth. (Even so, Miss Swarthout said something under her breath after the Pittaluga song in which she was not completely at home.)

Italian Group Sung Well

An Italian group of modern songs sounded even better tonally though they were a bit alike harmonically. They followed a reading of Charlotte's Letter Scene from Massenet's Werther. This was delivered with more introspection than inner longing. The opening cries of "Werther" could be far more moving and a case could be made for starting the rather lengthy recitative with the line, "Ces lettres." But what a fine operatic scene for concert!

Five recent songs by John Duke, Deems Taylor and Celius Dougherty concluded the formal listings. Of these, the Taylor was weak and tedious. Both Duke songs are gems, with a special nod to the Viennese Waltz. (And again, what was that remark after the song, Miss S.?)

Welcome Finale

Dougherty's Declaration of Independence, sung here two weeks ago by Norman Farrow, is a clever piece of "little boy" play. And how welcome a final song which is quiet and not the typical big loud crashing close.

It was a fine, thoughtful concert made even more beautiful by the noble tone and elegant style of Gibner King's pianism. In the Auvergne songs, the Duke waltz, and many others, he did outstanding service.

Five encores included Poulenc's Chemin d'Amour, Go 'Way From My Window, Bless This House and arias from Offenbach's Perichole and Carmen.

U. S. Answers Russian Attack With 'Live and Let Live' Plea

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—United States Ambassador Warren R. Austin urged the Soviet Union today to "live and let live" and to act in good faith with other peoples if the Russians really want peace.

He spoke in the UN Assembly, which had before it a Western power resolution setting up 12 essentials of peace. It was approved by a 53-to-5 vote in the Political Committee and brought before the Assembly for ratification.

A rival Soviet resolution condemns Britain and the United States on grounds they are building up to war and then urges them to agree to a new peace pact among the Big Five.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky started the final round in the Assembly on his so-called peace plan which already had been rejected by the Political Committee. He recited a long history of what he called the Soviet struggle for peace. Then he struck at the United States and Britain with old charges and wound up by saying military and civilian leaders in the United States are engaged in a "thorough, businesslike American way" of preparing for war.

Austin, obviously aroused, told the Assembly the Russians have not cooperated with the rest of the world and that a new peace pact would be hampered by the same old story of noncooperation. Then he said, especially to the Soviet delegation:

"Live and let live. Replace sweeping propaganda gestures with earnest efforts to settle outstanding difficulties."

United West Can Prevent War, Viscount Montgomery Says

New York, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—The clash between communism and democracy is endangering civilization but a united West can prevent war, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery said tonight.

"Communism is a religion and is anti-Christian, retrograde and immoral," Montgomery said. "As a Christian soldier I declare myself an enemy of communism and all that it stands for."

Montgomery is chairman of the commanders-in-chief committee of the Western Union, formed by Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. He spoke tonight at the annual dinner of the English-speaking Union.

He said Western nations must be prepared to sacrifice even part of their sovereignty to forge a common defense against the "destruction of civilization" a new war would bring.

"One of the really important things to understand is that none of us can stand alone," he warned. "If the West were to be overrun, that would be the end of Western civilization.

"It is a very testing time. Above all it is necessary to be organized for what may come."

If the five nations of the Western Union achieve "real and true cooperation" with an accompanying willingness "to suffer, if necessary, some small loss of sovereignty for the common purpose," their strength through unity can stave off war, he said.

Thomas Put Kin on Payroll, FBI Agent Testifies at Trial

Fay and Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly, who conducted much of the Government's case, said the documents contained "extraneous material" not essential to prosecution of the case.

It was indicated that neither counsel for Thomas nor for Miss Campbell would seek to introduce the original documents and that the "extraneous material" would remain a mystery throughout the trial.

Whether the two statements to the FBI would shed any light on the secret of why, after 11 years of service as the New Jersey Congressman's confidential secretary, Miss Campbell decided to go "voluntarily" to the Department of Justice with information against him apparently is slated to remain under court wraps.

Warned of Danger

Vechery told the court that Miss Campbell, who told the FBI she had worked for Thomas from January, 1937, to August, 1948, was warned of the danger of incriminating herself before she started giving her volunteered testimony.

Miss Campbell is on trial with Thomas on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government by having her niece, Myra Midkiff, now Mrs. Rean D. Chilson, and later her maid, Arnette Minor, placed on the Congressman's payroll although they did no work.

Mrs. Chilson On Stand Today

Mrs. Chilson is slated to be a witness today, Fay told reporters.

Thomas is also on trial on three separate fraud counts in connection with the placing of Mrs. Jacqueline Voss Hill on the payroll. The Government claims that Thomas placed her on the payroll of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and took all but $50 a month of her salary as a "kickback." Mrs. Hill did no work except the addressing of 500 personal Christmas cards for Thomas, the Government claims.

There was no testimony that Thomas collected any kickbacks from his two relatives. Two other names, however, those of Thelma Coffee, an employe in Thomas' office in 1944, and Edith Squier, who worked for him in 1941 and 1942, were brought into the picture.

Arthur M. Atkinson, manager of the East Capitol branch of the City Bank, testified as to 22 ledger sheets representing Miss Campbell's account with the bank.

These showed that some 66 Government checks made out to Thomas' employes were deposited in Miss Campbell's account between 1940 and 1945. Most were payments to Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor but the two other names appeared also.

John R. Fitzpatrick, attorney for Miss Campbell, admitted she indorsed the checks, thus smoothing the path for the Government to get them into evidence.

William H. Collins, attorney for Thomas, however, won an important legal point when he objected to these checks being used as evidence against his client.

Ruling, Favors Thomas

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled the checks might be considered only as evidence against Miss Campbell, and not as evidence against Thomas.

At one time when Collins interposed an objection to the "hearsay" character of some of the evidence against Thomas, Miss Campbell, who remained grim-faced throughout most of the day, gave a short hard laugh and leaned over to make a comment to her attorney.

J. Crawford Shanks, assistant disbursing officer of the House of Representatives, testified that Grace E. Wilson was on Thomas' payroll on Capitol Hill at a salary of $2900 a year from January, 1945, to July, 1946.

Shanks testified that Lillian Thomas, the legislator's daughter-in-law, went on the payroll at $2900 a year in July, 1946, but was cut to $2500 in February, 1947, and to $500 in December, 1947.

Meet Bernie Miesch — Another "Do-it-yourself" American

He's coming up on his own!

Bernard X. Miesch of Manchester, Conn., had only a 7th grade schooling. But he studied after work, took courses at the plant, taught himself mathematics. He made the most of a talent for "three-dimensional vision"... never said "no" to the chance to learn a new skill. As a result, he raised himself from part-time mechanic to crack set-up man on turret lathes at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. He didn't stop there! Today at 36 he's a standards analyst—a job that college men aspire to. And he did it on his own!

It's a Fact...

It's a fact that over the years life insurance has constantly expanded its protection and its services so that it can benefit more and more people...

- Additional types of protection and rates for all kinds of risk have been developed to fit the needs of a greater number of Americans than ever before.
- These new types of policies, and new methods of using life insurance, keep it flexible . . . ready to meet changing and expanding needs.
- As a result, 4 out of 5 American families now enjoy the peace of mind that comes from owning life insurance.
- Most of these are people of modest means... people to whom this protection is particularly important.
- The 584 actively competing companies train their agents to help America's families get the life insurance that best fits their needs and their means.

To make sure you're getting the greatest value from your present life insurance, see your agent. Life insurance is a service! Your agent is trained to help you use it most effectively. The Institute of Life Insurance—central source of information—60 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y

☆ It's the American Spirit!

You'll hear success stories like Bernie Miesch's all over America! Right now, in 1949, there are "new frontiers" of opportunity on Main Streets everywhere. And folks with the energy and initiative to make the most of them. For the do-it-yourself spirit is as lively today in this country as ever.

You see it in the fact that so many folks believe in providing for their personal tomorrows on their own. 78 million Americans prove it by holding life insurance. For with life insurance they know they are themselves providing for their widows, their children, their own old age ... in the self-respecting American way.

As a result, the demand for life insurance grows as the country itself grows. Serving so many millions becomes a major job. To serve them well, to meet their changing needs, 584 life insurance companies are in active competition. 150,000 trained life insurance agents devote their lives to helping Americans help themselves!

LIFE INSURANCE—Helping American Families to Help Themselves

Hiss Trial Note Hints Reds Got Ship Plans

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—A cryptic note hinting that the Russians obtained plans for two prewar American superbattleships was read today at an explosive session of Alger Hiss' perjury trial.

The Government also bared secret reports intended to show how a fantastic Soviet underground web was woven deep into Washington in the early New Deal days to influence United States Government policy.

Both disclosures came in the form of reports by Government officials of talks with Whittaker Chambers, chief accuser of Hiss and former courier for a Russian spy ring.

The battleship note, jotted by Assistant Secretary of State Adolph Berle in 1939, read:

"Plans for two superbattleships—secured in 1937—who gave—Karp—brother-in-law of Molotov—working with Scott Ferris got this released—now; naval architect working on it, why; Field was original contact. He introduced Z to Gompertz (Hedda)—Z relationship was casual—shall excuse?—where is Hedda Gompertz?—Z and Field supposed to have been both members of party."

Name Blacked Out

The Z referred to an individual whose name was blacked out. Defense Attorney Claude B. Cross said he did not object to the document but thought use of the name would affect the reputation of a dead man.

Molotov, former Russian Foreign Minister, now is Deputy Premier.

A Hedda Gumperz Massing is a former wife of Gerhart Eisler, who fled the U. S. last spring after being identified as the No. 1 Communist in this country.

Mrs. Massing has been described as a "cooperative witness" in postwar American spy hunts.

There was no clew to the identity of "Field" or the "Scott Ferris" mentioned.

Chambers has testified that he approached Berle in 1939 to warn him of Communist activities in the U. S.

Chambers also has accused Hiss of feeding him State Department secrets before the war in wholesale fashion. Hiss was indicted for perjury when he denied ever giving Chambers state documents or even seeing him after January 1, 1937.

New Dealers Named

Hiss was tried for perjury last spring but a jury split eight for conviction and four for acquittal and a new trial was ordered.

The second report in the form of twin memos on the underground was full of some of the names from Franklin D. Roosevelt's early New Deal. The individuals were described as "anti-Administration" at the time.

The names came out in memos written by Raymond Murphy, Security officer of the State Department, who made notes of two talks in 1945 and 1946 with Chambers.

The underground's purpose was said in the memos to be "far more important and cunning" than spying.

". . . each member (was) to advance as high as possible in the Government to shape legislation favorable to the program of the Communist government," read the hitherto secret reports.

Function of J. Peters

The guiding genius of the entire underground was identified as Hungarian-born J. Peters, "a little dark fellow, small feet and wavy black hair."

Top man and founder of the 10-man Washington cells was said to be the late Harold Ware, who died in 1936 and was allegedly succeeded by Nathan Witt and later John Abt.

Immediately below him in order of importance, the reports charged, were Lee Pressman, former general counsel of the CIO, and Alger Hiss, later to become a top-level State Department aide.

The memos said Hiss' job "was never to make converts—his job was to mess up policy."

The Government aides whom Chambers accused were said in the memos to have "arranged among themselves a program committing this Government to a policy in keeping with the desires of the Communists."

Underground headquarters in Washington, the memos said, included "a violin studio near Dupont Circle run by Helen Ware, (and) a school on the outskirts of Washington run by Alice Mendham."

Chambers was quoted as saying he entered "the Washington picture" in 1935 and left it and the party at the end of 1937.

"The heads of the various underground groups in Washington who met with Peters," the memos continued, "were the Hisses, Kramer (Krivitzky), Henry Collins, who was either secretary or treasurer of the group; John Abt, Lee Pressman, Nat Perlow and Nat Witt.

"These men met regularly at special meetings, with the exception of Donald Hiss who did not have an organization. They headed parallel organizations . . ."

The memos alleged there were other underground Communist groups in Washington at the time "but this was the elite policy-making, top-level group."

"It was not a spy ring," read the records, "but one far more important and cunning because its members helped to shape policy in their departments."

The memos described Henry Collins as an employe of the forestry division of the Agriculture Department at the time and said he took the lead in delivering Government documents to Chambers.

In testimony after the memos were read, Chambers said sailors or stewards of the North German Lloyd Line usually took Government secrets to Europe for the ring.

GOP Is Sounded Out On Issues Statement

By The Associated Press

Chairman Guy Gabrielson yesterday asked Republican National committeemen and other party leaders to answer in three weeks these two questions:

1. Should the GOP restate its principles in advance of the 1950 elections?

2. If so, what should such restatement contain?

In a letter to Republican Governors, State chairmen and vice chairmen, county chairmen and vice chairmen, and National Committee members, Gabrielson said:

"The over-all objective is to obtain expressions of opinion resting on the broadest base possible. If our national policy really reflects sentiment from the grass roots up, we will get somewhere next year."

The party is divided on the advisability of attempting to revamp the 1948 platform as a guide for its candidates in the elections next year. Most of the opposition comes from leaders in the Senate and House like Senator Taft of Ohio and Representative Martin of Massachusetts.

But Gabrielson acted under a resolution adopted by the national committee last August authorizing him to appoint a committee of Senators, Representatives, national and State committeemen to draft a "statement of principles."

In his letter yesterday Gabrielson said he had confered with congressional leaders and it now appears likely he will be able to name the committee soon.

He asked that the answers be sent to the national committee not later than December 21 or the convening of Congress in January.

Taft Asks End to Armed Aid, Tapering Off of ECA by 1952

Senator Robert A. Taft yesterday called for termination of military assistance to friendly countries next year and complete shutoff of ECA and other foreign aid in 1952.

Opposing President Truman's bid for increased taxes, the Ohio Republican said the way to balance the budget is to taper down foreign aid to largely self-liquidating projects.

Even then, he added, this Government still will operate with a deficit next year.

Taft said: "If we can agree on the policy of discontinuing foreign aid in 1952, I believe we could make a substantial cut in the deficit next year, and reach a balanced budget the following year without increasing taxes."

"Washington Report"

Taft, who led the unsuccessful Senate fight against the North Atlantic Pact, remarked in his weekly "Washington Report" to Ohio papers:

"I believe the military assistance program should be brought to an end. ECA is due for a further reduction this coming winter. After a still further reduction the following year it is supposed to terminate in 1952.

"We should certainly adhere to that program, for no nation is wealthy enough to support the rest of the world indefinitely. A realistic rehabilitation policy in Germany and Japan should relieve the American taxpayer of the billions now furnished to our former enemies.

"Altogether, our aid to foreign countries ought to be reduced to those projects which are self-liquidated and which can largely be handled by guarantees to private capital."

Taft termed the prospective 5.5 billion dollar deficit announced by President Truman "the most serious immediate problem" facing Congress, and said the way to meet it is to cut costs rather than increase taxes.

Sawyer Hints He Would End War Excises

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer hinted yesterday that he would recommend to President Truman that the wartime excise taxes be repealed or greatly reduced.

Speaking at a National Press Club lunch, Sawyer did not divulge what precise recommendations he would make to Mr. Truman as a result of his four-month "grass roots" tour to investigate general business conditions.

But he emphasized the universal sentiment that he said he found among all businessmen in all areas for repeal of the excise taxes.

The taxes were levied during the war and apply to such items as furs, jewelry, cosmetics, leather goods, plane, rail and bus fares, theater tickets, etc. As Sawyer pointed out, they were designed to deter spending in those lines during the war, and hence may not be appropriate now.

Sawyer said he found a general feeling of optimism among the 2500 or 3000 businessmen he talked to.

Aside from purely local problems, Sawyer said he found, besides the matter of excise tax repeal, four general themes that the business community discussed with concern:

1. Objection to "double taxation" of business, in the form of corporate taxes on profits and subsequent income taxes paid by those who received dividends.

2. A desire for tax provisions allowing speedier amortization of new plant and equipment.

3. Concern for the provision of equity capital for small businesses.

4. The need for economy in Federal expenditures.

fanatical following, neither has he violent enemies."

The report coincided with Democratic preparations, from the President down, to throw everything the party has into the congressional campaign.

A $100-a-plate dinner in New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Friday night will touch off the fund-raising phase. President Truman reportedly has passed word down the line through the national committee that the party's war chest shouldn't be spared.

Some Strictly Confidential

What Harding had to say about the reelection prospects of individual Democrats, and turntable GOP districts, where Democrats hope to make a killing, was kept strictly confidential between the President, the National Committee and Harding.

In one State, Wisconsin, he said he found the Democratic outlook so bright that he returned there last week for a recheck. He reported the Democrats not only stand to hold what they have there, but to pick up at least four more congressional seats.

Some of his general conclusions on the coast-to-coast area covered:

"Business conditions—Good except in areas affected by the coal and steel strikes.

"Farm—Crops good. Generally satisfactory prices. Little complaint. Republicans are no longer trusted. Many seem to feel that Democrats mean well, but all are not satisfied that the party has a consistent policy. Brannan plan is not understood.

Must See That Labor Votes

"Labor—Labor generally OK, but some expect the impossible. It may be difficult to keep labor awake to the necessity of voting in 1950.

"Housing (shortage)—Still acute in metropolitan centers.

"Civil rights—No particular attention except in racial centers.

"Foreign policy—Not too much interest but there is some grumbling on domestic economies, while money is spent abroad.

"National defense — Little interest in Armed Forces row, except among professionals of various units."

Motorist Who Hit Police Cycle Fined $120 as Drunk

A motorist who smashed his car into a policeman's motorcycle while the latter was questioning another driver on Highway Bridge yesterday was sentenced to pay a $100 fine or serve 30 days for drunken driving and $20 or 20 days for speeding.

The motorist, arraigned in Municipal Court, was William I. Garrett, 23, of 114 South Fairfax st., Arlington. He was arrested earlier this month by Traffic Policeman Valdean Wham after he hit Wham's cycle and then careened his car into a truck.

The driver Wham was questioning at the time, Master Sergt. Mack E. Douett, Marine Barracks, Henderson Hall, Va., several days ago was sentenced to a $50 fine or serve 60 days for drunken driving and fined $10 for speeding.

Costello Helps to Select a Judge

try," he said, but didn't want to mention their names because it might "embarrass them."

"You know the worst, too, don't you?" asked District Attorney Hogan.

"Yes," Costello admitted.

Those he admitted having known constituted an underworld who's who, past and present. They included Arnold Rothstein, Al Capone, Owney Madden, Joe Adonis, Frank Erickson, "Buggsie" Siegel, Abe (Longey) Zwillman, "Little Augie" Pisano, "Socks" Lanza, "Dandy Phil" Kastel, Frank (The Enforcer) Nitti, Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, Dutch Schultz and others.

"So that made me a Dracula," Costello said to me, throwing out his arms.

He said the newspapers had failed to point out, as he had in his testimony, that he had no business dealings with any of these except Adonis and Kastel.

Costello said that it was inevitable that in his business as a gambler he would meet a lot of notorious people.

"It was the same way with Bradley," he said.

Costello mentioned the name of the late Col. Ed Bradley with something akin to reverence. It was pretty clear that he would like to have the respect that was accorded to Bradley, who rose from a small-time gambler and bookmaker to be owner of the famous casino at Palm Beach and an outstanding turfman, the first to send four Derby winners to the post.

Since the Aurelio case, publicity has been coming fast and furious for Frank Costello.

In 1944 he stepped out of a taxicab and left behind him an envelope containing $27,200 in $50 and $100 bills. The driver turned the money over to the police and the story came out when Costello tried to get it back.

"Give me a break for a change," he said to a reporter on that occasion, "and write a nice story about me."

Bid Luciano Godspeed

In 1946, Costello showed that, despite his eagerness to know the "best people," he was not one to repudiate the other kind.

He went down to Ellis Island to say goodby to Charles (Lucky) Luciano, who was being deported to Italy after a 10-year stretch at Dannemora on prostitution charges.

Costello's role as philanthropist came to light last January, when Cholly Knickerbocker, a society reporter, stumbled onto a party he was giving in the Copacabana. It was a $100-a-plate affair for the Salvation Army. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy (Christy has done an oil portrait of Costello which hangs in the gambler's living room); Dr. Hoffman, the Park ave. psychiatrist; Justice Aurelio and other members of the State Supreme Court, Representative Arthur G. Klein, Manhattan Borough President Hugo Rogers and Carmine DeSapio, who succeeded Rogers as leader of Tammany Hall.

It was just after this that a New York reporter interviewed Dr. Hoffman. He quoted the psychiatrist as saying that Costello's mind was troubled, that he didn't sleep so well and that he, Hoffman, advised him to "get out and meet some nice people."

Dr. Hoffman, who lists Doris Duke, the heiress, among his patients, told me that he didn't think he had said anything to Costello about "nice people." He said he urged him to meet with "people of merit and culture," as gamblers like Bradley and Canfield did years ago.

Dr. Hoffmann has an ornate establishment at 870 Park ave. One of the things that impress a visitor is an oil portrait of the psychiatrist, showing him in the uniform of an Army officer. It, too, is the work of Howard Chandler Christy.

"To me he is a fascinating and picturesque character," Dr. Hoffmann said of Costello.

He told how he met Costello about 20 years ago in a courtroom, after testifying in behalf of two bootleggers in whom Costello was interested. The bootleggers were charged with attacking a policeman, and the policeman had offered as evidence a numbr of photographs of alleged wounds.

"I was able to show that the photographs were spurious," Dr. Hoffmann said. "I didn't know Costello at the time. He came up to me and said, 'Doctor, you did a fine job.' He insisted that I take a fee much larger than I had intended to charge."

Dr. Hoffmann said he had not been Costello's psychiatrist because the gambler was a mental case, but because he needed a friend. He said he used to see him once a week, and would urge him to talk himself out.

"I never took a nickel from him," he added. "Oh, I might have accepted an occasional case of Scotch."

Dr. Hoffmann was lavish in praise of Costello's native intelligence. He said he was convinced that if the gambler had been fortunate enough to have had a good formal education, he could have been anything he wanted to be. Some of his other remarks in appraising Costello were, to put it mildly, startling. He said Costello was by nature timid, and probably would faint at the sight of a gun.

The psychiatrist told many stories of Costello's generosity and thoughtfulness. Once, he said, a New York judge needed $5000 in a hurry. Costello lent him the money, he said, and then refused to accept an I.O.U. for it.

The judge, according to Hoffmann, pointed out to Costello that he might be killed in an accident or die in some other way; then Costello would have no evidence of the $5000 loan.

"Costello told him," Hoffmann said, "that he might be killed himself. Then they would find the I.O.U. on him, and that wouldn't be so good for the judge."

Dr. Hoffmann, in one of his revelations, indicated that he had sometimes annoyed Costello in his efforts to help him out. He told me that Costello was worried about his language, and that he had sought to help him. He recalled that, on one occasion, he advised him to say "picture" and not "pitcher."

"You understand me, don't you?" Costello shot back, according to the psychiatrist.

Dr. Hoffmann told another story that indicated that Costello, at times, must wonder about some of his so-called friends.

It seems that Costello met an old acquaintance and discovered that he had lost three fingers of one hand. Costello remarked that it was "terrible."

"No," said the man, bitterly. "Now, when I hold up my hand, I know how many friends I've got."

Costello was much moved, according to Dr. Hoffmann, and seemed to have been jolted into wondering how many true friends he himself had.

In our luncheon talk, I remarked to Costello that I had called on Dr. Hoffmann.

"Did he say I was a patient?" he asked, and he wasn't smiling.

I explained that Dr. Hoffman had told me he regarded him as a friend, not a patient, and had said some very complimentary things about him.

Costello, however, did not want to be pacified. Obviously, he was still vexed over the "nice people" business.

"I introduced Hoffman to more nice people than he ever introduced me to," Costello said sharply.

He said that he and Hoffman used to walk through Central Park together on Sunday mornings and that afterward Hoffman would tell him about his cases (without mentioning names) and ask his advice. In three fourths of the cases, Costello said, Hoffman accepted his judgment and passed on his advice to the patients.

In August, Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) brought Costello's name into the Senate's 5-percenter hearing. He asked Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, if Costello had sent him a campaign contribution through John Maragon. Vaughan's answer was, "Certainly not."

McCarthy said he thought Costello was a "very necessary witness," and announced that he would "insist" on calling him when the committee resumes hearings next year.

Committee investigators have been gathering material in this connection by going through the files of the New York State Liquor Authority. These show that Costello and William Hellis, the "Golden Greek," both helped a man named Irving Heim to buy the British company, J. G. Turney & Son, Ltd., holding company for William Whitely & Co. of Leeds, Scotland, makers of House of Lords and Kings Ransom, Scotch whiskies.

William Hellis, it was brought out at the 5-percenters hearing, did send General Vaughan a campaign contribution, although there was no indication that it had anything to do with the liquor deal.

Firm's Agent in America

What interested this reporter in the files of the State Liquor Authority was a photostatic copy of the minutes of a meeting held in London in 1938 by the directors of Turney & Son. At this meeting, Costello was appointed the company's personal agent in the United States to "promote and further the sale of the company's brands of whisky."

He was to receive 5000 pounds sterling a year, plus 5 shillings a case on every case in excess of 50,000 shipped to the United States.

Costello's duties? They were the kind that only a man of distinction could handle. Among other things, he was to promote the company's interests by "frequenting first-class hotels and restaurants and asking to be supplied with the company's brands."

In other words, he was to ask for House of Lords or Kings Ransom.

It would be interesting to know if any bartender, not being able to supply him with these brands the first time, ever dared let it happen a second time.

Rail Leaders See Future Dark If They Must Pay U. S.

By the United Press

Railroad industry leaders yesterday said their operations in any future national emergency would be crippled seriously if they were forced to pay the Government's claim for two billion dollars in alleged freight rate overcharges.

They told the Interstate Commerce Commission that rates charged during the war were lower than those levied against the general public and that Federal agencies more than got their money's worth.

The commission is considering the Government's rebate claim against 900 railroads. It heard the Government's case last June.

Gustav Metzman, president of the New York Central Railroad, accused the Government of filing its claim without regard for the carriers' wartime costs "and certainly without any serious concern for the future of their ability to meet another national emergency."

"The rates during the war generally were reduced below those extended to commercial shippers, partly as a result of land grant rates and partly through special concessions made to Government agencies," he said.

J. M. Symes, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said payment of the claims would bankrupt the railroads. He testified that his line must spend more than 850 million dollars for facilities and deferred maintenance.

Ernest E. Norris, president of the Southern Railway System, said payment would mean that "a fatal blow will have been struck at the confidence and ability of this vital industry to meet any future emergency."

Merrel P. Callaway, chairman of the board of the Central of Georgia, said his line handled Government freight at rates "materially less" than those charged the general public and "did not earn a reasonable return for its service during the war period."

This was echoed by Robert E. Woodruff, chairman of the board of the Erie Railroad, and C. McD. Davis, president of the Atlantic Coast Line.

Russians to Return Icebreaker; 2 Stuck

Russia agreed yesterday to return to the United States immediately one of three icebreakers lent her during the war. She reported that the others still are frozen tight in the Arctic Ocean ice.

Vladimir I. Bazykin, Soviet Embassy counsellor, informed Deputy Undersecretary of State Dean Rusk that the 305-foot South Wind will be turned over to the United States at Yokosuka, Japan.

Farm Price Average Falls to Parity Level

Fight Predicted

Woods Sees Renewal of Rent Control

By the United Press

Rent Director Tighe E. Woods predicted yesterday that Congress will continue rent control for another year but that there will be a stiff fight over the issue.

He said he will ask for a one-year extension of the present rent law after its June 30 expiration date because "we haven't licked the housing shortage." He added that "maybe" ceilings can be abandoned by June, 1951, "provided industry and the Government work together to that end."

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), who led the Senate fight for rent control this year, has not indicated his personal views on another extension, but he has stated his belief that Congress will not vote to continue controls beyond next June 30.

A golden era ended for the Nation's farmers yesterday when the Agriculture Department reported they have lost all of the so-called "price advantage" they had held since start of the war.

In a monthly survey of farm and non-farm prices, it said farm prices in mid-November failed for the first time since November, 1941, to average out higher than "parity."

The department said the ratio of prices farmers receive for their crops to prices they must pay for things they buy was about the same as that which prevailed in 1910-14. Farm prices generally are said to be at "parity" when the 1910-14 ratio prevails.

The department reported continued declines in prices for hogs, corn, eggs and cotton, among other products. These were only partially offset by a considerable increase in truck crop prices and a slight rise in prices for some food grains.

Hog prices in mid-November were lower than at any time since price ceilings were lifted in 1946. Producer prices for hogs averaged $15.60—just 60 cents above the price support level. This represented a drop of $2 from the mid-October price.

The report showed that soy bean prices dropped to the lowest point in five years.

Coffee Stocks At New Peak, Gillette Says

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) said yesterday that "apparently the public has been misled into scare-buying that has been good news to coffee speculators and foreign coffee interests."

Gillette declared that a study of import and consumption figures for coffee indicate that "1949 will provide the United States with the highest stocks on record, while consumption will be below the maximum."

Gillette announced that he had called upon Philip M. Hauser of the Census Bureau for figures on stocks on hand. He wants them to prepare for a probe by his Senate subcommittee later this week and early next week into coffee prices.

"Throughout the war," Gillette said, "the Census Bureau collected statistics on stocks of both green and roasted coffee and made these statistics public.

"Selfish trade interests and speculators were able to persuade the bureau and the Agriculture Department to discontinue this in February, 1847."

Gillette said he believed that with the information he has asked "action can be taken to prevent the further gouging of the public."

Prince Georges Master Zoning Plan Voted

the Planning Commission and the County Commissioners in considering future zoning changes.

When Harry M. McNamee, president of the Board of Commissioners, asked for a voice vote only two dissenters were heard.

McNamee said the estimated 18 pending applications for rezoning scheduled for hearing December 21 in Hyattsville will be heard as usual. If approved they will be rezoned according to the new reclassification, he said.

The zoning ordinance has had general citizen approval thoughout a series of public hearings since it was officially unveiled by the Planning Commission June 18, 1948.

Outspoken in its favor at last night's packed session were representative of the county's Civic Federation, League of Women Voters and several municipal citizens' groups.

The one outspoken critic was Ervin Hohensee, a College Park property owner, who urged the County Commissioners to postpone adoption at least six months.

"It would take a Philadelphia lawyer to understand all the ramifications of this document," he said.

Under the ordinance the present three residential, one commercial, and one industrial classifications are replaced by these zoning designations:

R-18 (low-density residential); R-10 (medium-density residential); C-1 (light commercial); C-2 (heavy commercial); I-1 (light industrial); I-2 (heavy industrial); R-R (rural residential); R-35 (two-family semi-detached and detached residential); R-55 (one-family detached residential); R-20 (one-family triple-attached residential), and R-P-C (planned community, such as Greenbelt and Langley Park).

Papers in Colombia Get Out Despite All

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Liberal newspapers reappeared today after a four-hour "strike" against Sunday's one-party presidential election in which Conservative Laureano Gomez ran unopposed.

Two days after the election the country remained under modified martial law, strict press censorship and a 7 p. m. curfew.

There were no indications these restrictive measures would be lifted soon.

FAO Lacking Cash For Move to Rome

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, which voted at midnight Monday night to move from Washington to Rome, woke up yesterday to learn it hasn't the cash to finance the move.

In fact, it learned from Director General Norris E. Dodd that it hasn't enough income to meet its expenses, and that moving costs will be vastly higher than the delegates thought when they voted, 30 to 28, against President Truman's personally-delivered invitation to remain here.

Proponents of the move to Rome—led by Sir Donald Vandepeer of the British delegation—voted to move to Rome on Vandepeer's argument that operations in Rome would be much cheaper than in the United States.

Dodd broke the news to the delegates yesterday in Commission III that there is a big chance that expenses in Rome may be as much, if not more, than they would have been in the United States.

$1,337,000 Cost Listed

A study by the Working Committee on a Permanent Site that was furnished delegates listed the cost of moving to Rome at $1,337,000. But the committee failed to include some expenses that Dodd said will have to be met.

"We will have to open an American regional office" he said. He added that increased funds will be needed for liason with the United Nations at New York. FAO works in close conjunction with U. N. FAO officials travel constantly between Washington and New York. When the trip is from Rome, the expenses will be vastly increased.

Dodd then spoke of extra funds needed for separation payments that will have to be made to staff members who do not go to Rome. He also listed payments necessary to send home other staff members who do not elect to go to Rome.

It was also pointed out that FAO in Italy will meet the same financial difficulties that "soft currency" nations face. FAO rules provide that contributions by member nations to FAO be made in the currency of the host nation. Thus FAO in Italy will have plenty of lira, but few dollars to meet expenses that will be incurred largely in dollars. These include trips to the United Nations and other countries, payments to retirement funds, payments to American employes, and many others.

Building Not Ready

Adding to the embarrassment of the pro-Rome group was an announcement from Italy that the building the Italian government promised will not be ready for at least 10 months. The building is one that was started by Mussolini before the war to house the Ministry for African Colonies. However, the war interferred before the building was completed. What remains now is an empty shell on which nothing has been done since early in the war.

Further, the delegates have been warned by the Rt. Rev. L. G. Liguitti, premanent observer at FAO for the Holy See, that there will be no housing facilities available in Rome for at least all of 1950. Next year is Holy Year and the Romans are expecting a daily influx of at least 40,000 pilgrims throughout the entire 12 months.

A suggestion by Malik Feroz Khan Noon of Pakistan that the organization borrow on savings that will result from operations in Rome, as compared with Washington, was abruptly squelched after it had been supported by several other delegates.

Dodd termed this suggestion as "the worst financial operation I have ever known."

"I wouldn't advise spending any savings until the savings are made," he said. He added that already expenses are about a million dollars above what FAO was able to collect from member nations last year.

Dodd's insistence that FAO members must raise additional funds at once to pay for the move met with quick disapproval from several delegates. Mario Rodriguez of Chile remarked that present FAO expenses were a burden to many states, and he wondered what the reaction of his government would be to any request for more.

Several delegates suggested that, even after they had given the United States a humiliating defeat on the Monday night vote, the United States put up the funds for the move.

Dr. B. R. Sen of India, chairman of Commission III, remarked that the United States "was willing to lend us seven million dollars for a building in this country, why won't they lend us money to move?"

The Finnish delegate suggested that the move be financed by the United States under the Point Four program—a program suggested by President Truman in his inauguration speech.

Vandepeer suggested that Dodd make a study of the problem, with a report to the meeting of the FAO council next April. However, Secretary General Marc Veillet La Vallee pointed out to Vandepeer that the matter was one for which the Council would not want to accept responsibility — that it should be borne by the conference. He then added that, in order to soon, save already scarce funds, the council had recommended that no meeting of the conference be held next year—that the next be in 1951.

Commission III finally decided that a committee of delegates from the United Kingdom, the United States and France draw up a report on the strange morning-after situation the conference has gotten into, to be given to the conference

Heat-Resistant Calf . . .

The Washington Post

"THE QUEEN IS HERE"—That was the message delivered to Dr. O. E. Reed, chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry late Monday night. It told him of the long-awaited birth of the first two-way cross of a special dairy cattle breed at the Beltsville Government Experimental Station. Dennis Dickefoose, Beltsville employe, displays the calf, whose mother was a one-way cross between a Red Sindhi bull and a Jersey heifer, and whose father was a pure Red Sindhi. It is expected to start a line of heat-resistant dairy cattle. It is hoped this line will answer the question of milk production in hot Southern States. The Red Sindhi cattle are the dairy strain of the Brahma cattle of tropical India. Note the hump, characteristic of the calf's father and grandfather, just above her shoulders

Son of Zilahy Dies In Shooting Accident

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 29 (U.P.). A shooting accident on the Harvard University indoor rifle range proved fatal for the 18-year-old son of novelist Lajos Zilahy.

Michael Zilahy, Brooklyn, N. Y., a freshman honor student, died last night from a bullet wound in his forehead. He was adjusting the strap on a .22 caliber target rifle when it was discharged, police said.

FAO Aiding Two Other Units In Feeding of Needy Children

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization is aiding two other international agencies to provide milk for children in eastern Europe and Central America, FAO Director-General Norris E. Dodd told the Dairy Industries Society, Interntaional, yesterday.

The total program, Dodd said, called for an expenditure of more than a million dollars.

"In the European program, a committee of FAO and the World Health Organization advised the United Ntaions International Children's Emergency Fund in child nutrition," Dodd said.

"To provide the greatest amounts of proteins and other nutrients lacking in the diets of pregnant and nursing women and in children, the group gave especial emphasis to dried skim milk."

They also have advised the fund how to increase Europe's supply of fresh milk, he added. "By next June 30 UNICEF-assisted plants will be in operation in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Malta, Poland and Yugoslavia.

The same group has set up school feeding and milk improvement programs in Central America, with an appropriation of $240,000 for El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Yesterday afternoon the delegates to the International Milk Association visited Washington's milk distributing plants. Today they will visit a number of dairy farms in the Washington milk shed in Virginia and Maryland.

The lease on the area bounded by Indiana ave., 6th st., C st. nw. and Municipal Center Plaza begins Thursday.

Disaster At Dallas

Yesterday's fatal plane crash at Dallas will add to the growing disquietude over the safety of air travel. November has been a month of calamities and near-calamities. To be sure, only two of the mishaps have involved civilian transport planes—the American Airlines crash yesterday which claimed 28 lives and the collision of a private plane with an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 here November 1 which killed 55 persons. But it is inevitable that these disasters will be linked together with military crashes and the chain of near-collisions. For the fact is that the air is still a relatively new medium, and when crashes do occur the fatality rate is usually higher than in other modes of transportation.

Actually, the spectacular nature of air disasters tends to obscure the good record of the airlines. For example, this was the first crash in which a passenger was killed on American Airlines since March 3, 1946. In the meantime, American had flown 10,869,000 passengers safely nearly 5½ billion passenger-miles. Indeed, safety figures for all domestic airlines stack up very well so far in 1949 considering the immense number of miles traveled. Up until yesterday the fatality rate was only 1.1 per 100 million passenger-miles.

Statistics, however, are scant comfort alone. What is important is that positive steps be taken to prevent a recurrence of these types of crashes. For instance, the Eastern plane was the innocent victim of pilot error and general congestion at the National Airport. Some of the lessons of this collision already have been applied in the ban on fighter-type aircraft at National; but there will be no real solution until military traffic is moved away from Bolling and Anacostia fields. Fortunately, the pilot and copilot of the American DC-6 survived the crash into a building at Dallas, and it is probable that the cause of this disaster also can be determined fairly precisely. Whether the trouble was motor failure or some other factor not yet uncovered, the best way to restore confidence is to make all the facts public and then to act on them promptly.

Jerusalem

At last the Jordanians have brought the issue over Jerusalem down to earth. Appearing before the General Assembly's Special Political Committee, Fouzi Pasha el Mulki said that his government was quite content with the status quo, meaning Jordanian retention of the Old City and Israeli retention of the New City. There is no other solution that is at all practicable. All over the world ideas and plans have been forthcoming which in different ways would put the Old City and the New City under some kind of international government. This, of course, was proposed in the 1947 Assembly recommendation of partition and economic union for Palestine, but there was no follow-through, in spite of Jewish agreement. In default the subsequent history has been written in blood, and a settlement already has been achieved in terms of power. It is unrealistic to think that the parties in possession would turn back the clock on the say-so of a body whose recommendation in the first place failed to get support from the leading members of it. The present clamor for internationalization of the Holy City is in strange contrast to the contemptible silence that overtook the clamorers while the Holy City was a battlefield.

An example of changing attitudes is that of the Archbishop of Canterbury. An Archbishop of Canterbury in 1937 would have given the New City to the Jews, not because they have long been preponderant in population, but as fulfillment of what he called "the ideals of Zionism." His present successor, however, has been assiduously propagandizing and circulating extensively at Lake Success a plan which would restrict to Israel a certain part of the residential zone in the New City, giving the remaining area in Old and New Cities to the United Nations. The plan seemed to have won over the French and the Australians. Something similar came from the Roman Catholics. But no sooner had the Jordanian finished his speech laying down Amman's insistence on the status quo than the logical French saw the folly of trying to undo what Mr. Bunche in another connection had called the "vibrant realities," and offered the opinion that, after all, the United Nations might not be in a practical position to enforce the internationalization of Jerusalem. He might have added that that body is not in a moral position to do so, either. To be sure, an international curatorship is called for in respect of the Holy Places, sacred as they are to three great religions, Christian, Jewish, and Moslem. No difficulty would be encountered here, but, beyond that, the United Nations is confronted with a condition and not a theory, and should govern itself accordingly, as well as devote itself to the encouragement of neighborliness in the new Middle East.

Atom Conference

It is rather revealing that at the Atomic Energy Commission press conference on Monday, the director of information, Morse Salisbury, felt it necessary to begin by introducing the commissioners to the press. The most recent AEC press conference was held a year ago. The decision henceforward to hold press conferences about once a month seems to us altogether salutary. No governmental agency should operate in cloistered seclusion—least of all an agency dealing with matters vital to the national security in war and to the national economy in peace. It needs contact with the press not alone in order to give an accounting of its work to the public but for the sake of the stimulation stemming from exposure to query and challenge. The commission on the one hand and the press and public on the other will benefit from greater familiarity.

The inauguration of the new information policy was auspicious. It was made the occasion for announcing what may fairly be called the most significant peacetime development in atomic energy. If the "breeder reactor" to be constructed by the AEC lives up to the theoretical expectations of the physicists who designed it, production of fissionable material will be significantly increased by conversion of part of the now unusable uranium that is the source of atomic energy. The plutonium to be derived from the reactor can be used either as a fuel for peacetime power or for bombs. The increased amount to become available will make peaceful applications more imminently possible. By 1952, the AEC hopes to be building the first model of an atomic engine to propel ships.

The manner in which this disclosure was made seems to us exemplary. A highly technical development replete with military and industrial implications was explained by AEC experts in such a way as to make it intelligible to the press and the public—yet without any revelation of techniques which ought to be kept secret. There are many other aspects of its work respecting which such exposition would be most useful. And, as we have observed before, we think the commission and the public alike would benefit from publication of formal opinions, by the minority when there is dissent as well as by the majority, concerning commission decisions that do not entail military secrets.

The whole temper of this press conference was in striking contrast to the irresponsibility of Senator Edwin C. Johnson's recent revelations on a television program about atomic bomb research. He gave out information to which he had become privy as a member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. Disclosure of this information was not authorized by the commission, by the President, or, for that matter, by law. We entirely agree with the Federation of American Scientists which asserted the other day that information of the type discussed by Senator Johnson ought to be made available to the public. But it ought to be made available by the Atomic Energy Commission itself, after due consideration, through processes such as the press conference on Monday. We hope for substantial progress in this direction.

Colombia Turns Right

In no sense can the Conservative victory in the Colombian presidential election be regarded as an expression of the majority will. There could have been no other result, because Dr. Laureano Gomez was the only candidate; the Liberals boycotted the election after the incumbent Conservative President, Mariano Ospina Perez, had declared a state of siege and suspended constitutional guarantees. Yet, judging from the Liberal majority in Congress, the Liberals stood a good chance of winning the presidency in a fair test.

Both parties have a great deal to answer for in the violence that preceded the balloting. The Liberals, feeling their oats after their success in the congressional elections last summer, withdrew their ministers from the coalition cabinet and rammed through a bill advancing the date of the presidential election. The Conservatives replied by nominating their most reactionary leader. Whether or not Dr. Gomez actually is an admirer of Franco, as is often charged, his economic and political views are such that his nomination constituted a deliberate provocation to the Liberals.

Regardless of the responsibility of the Liberals for making the first move, it was the Conservatives who capitalized on the terrorism that followed. The number of deaths is reported to run as high as 500, and the terror came to a sinister climax in the assassination two days before the election of Vicente Echandia, brother of the withdrawn Liberal nominee, Dario Echandia. The Conservatives also tried to make a religious issue of the campaign by implying that the Liberals, who stand for separation of church and state, are anticlerical. And, of course, it was the Conservatives who benefited from the martial law and censorship of the press which made Liberal political activity almost impossible for several weeks before the election.

Thus a moderate Conservative has been replaced with a reactionary. Colombia faces a continuation of the anomaly that has been a source of friction since 1946, when a Liberal split led to the election of a Conservative President and a Liberal legislature. This is not the first time that one party has boycotted the polls, but the situation that led up to the present trouble is the more regrettable because of Colombia's tradition of democratic procedures and the admirable way in which the parties composed their differences after the 1948 Bogota revolt.

Whether the tension now can be relieved without the civil war that has hitherto seemed almost inevitable will depend upon how far Dr. Gomez is willing to follow a path of conciliation and moderation. The results will be watched closely by everyone who deplores the hemisphere trend toward the overthrow of representative governments and the entrenchment of semifeudal forces. Colombia's experience affords an object lesson in what happens when democracy lacks the all-important catalyst of compromise.

Dr. Jessup's Case

The American resolution on China which Dr. Jessup has offered the United Nations reaffirms the principles of the open door and the territorial integrity and administrative independence of China. This is as far as the United States is prepared to go in supporting the Nationalist case against Soviet Russia. Not only did Dr. T. F. Tsiang want condemnation of Soviet activities in China; he asked for a pledge against recognition of Communist China. Plainly this country could not mortgage the future, but it would have been equally unwise not to seize the opportunity presented by Dr. Tsiang of reaffirming America's concern for a free China.

At present China has not yet asserted its independence. The Communists are leaning on Soviet Russia to such an extent that already the Russians seem to have become topdogs in Manchuria. Dr. Jessup called attention to the danger to China from this quarter. He did not say that United States policy at Yalta prepared the way for Russian severance of Manchuria by consenting to Manchurian port and Manchurian railroad concessions to Moscow. But the Chinese people may be assured that millions of Americans are bitterly resentful of that "deal." However, the Chinese are themselves to blame for everything that followed. Chiang Kai-shek by treaty validated the concessions, though only in return for "moral and material" help from Moscow which, with a cynicism that the world has come to associate with Moscow, was given to his enemies, the Chinese Communists. Chiang made matters worse for himself by sending to Manchuria (as well as Formosa) a sorry crew of carpetbaggers who promptly alienated the Manchurian people and made them turn to the Communists. The Communists seem to have completed the severance.

Some day or other the spirit of irredentism will rise again in respect of Manchuria, and the Russians will feel the brunt of it. Nothing is surer than that. All that the United States can do in the meantime is to bring home the fact in everything that is done and said on China that the Chinese have a thief in their household. As in 1927, when they threw the Russians out overnight, the Chinese have a way of dealing with intruders. We hazarded the other day that the Russians may have overplayed their hand in the Ward case. Latest reports are that their pushing of Lenin and Stalin to the fore is being resented. A story out of Peking is to the effect that a street procession turned into a riot as Chinese objectors reversed the order of the banners, and put Sun Yat-sen and Mao Tze-tung ahead of the Muscovite gods. Yes, the whirlwind will come.

Churchill: 75

In common with millions of people the world over, we felicitate Winston Churchill on his seventy-fifth birthday today. He seems to go from life to life as well as from strength to strength with undiminished zest. At present, in the intervals of party work, he is the herald in Europe of its "key of deliverance," viz, unity. Like Metternich, he sees salvation after fratricidal wars in terms of a unifying idea transcending national frontiers. Metternich's idea was legitimacy—of government. See that governments have a continuity with the past, and you need have no fear of transitional turmoil. Mr. Churchill sees the unifying idea in unity itself. What Mr. Churchill has in mind other than strategical integration and the incorporation of Western Germany into the European family is perhaps hard to find out from his speeches. But the function of spelling out aspirations is a task for others. As a modern John the Baptist Mr. Churchill is doing a noble service simply by articulating the dream and the hope of European man. That service is of a piece with Mr. Churchill's glittering career. He always makes news for what he does as well as for what he is. Lord Acton said that a great man was invariably an evil one. Mr. Churchill is an exception, and, if he were not so imbedded nowadays in party politics, he would deserve a monument in every capital of the free world while he is still living.

He who builds his happiness
On another's grief
Even in silken sleep must know
The cold sweat of the thief.

For all who build their happiness

Spanish Defense

The influence your newspaper might have on public opinion moves me to refute two comments on Spanish affairs in your November 23 edition.

In that day's political cartoon you show the chief of the Spanish state next to a pile of skulls and bones rolling out the carpet for a foreign visitor. On the latter I have nothing to say, but I do deny most emphatically the idea that the Spanish government is propped up on the remains of the victims of a supposed persecution, as your cartoonist would like us to infer. Only the more awkward type of Soviet propaganda chooses to maintain the fable at this late date.

Between people, however deeply divided in political matters, but united by certain common feelings, such inferences appear to be morally unacceptable. Any news correspondent, be he American or not, of The Washington Post or not, has free access to Spain, from where he can send stories proving that this slanderous legend of Soviet creation is completely unfounded.

The second commentary—one admitting honorable political discussion—is that of Mr. Marquis Childs, who reports a supposed fear in France regarding a proposed line of European defense at the Pyrenees. To do this, some believe, would be to abandon the Continent to enemy attack.

Could not the same be said for the rearmament of Norway, Great Britain, or North Africa? Arguing thus, would not American arms for Iceland be exposing Europe to enemy attack? The establishment of given bases and centers of resistance in different geographic locations does not necessarily entail the relinquishing of the other bases.

Certainly the inhabitants of the Peninsula would be ready to resist any act of aggression—for which eventually it would be better they were prepared. But nobody would be more pleased than the Spaniards to have the line of defense on the Rhine, on the Oder, or even on the Vistula. Or does anyone really believe that it is their desire to have war come with its horrible consequences to the Pyrenees and wish to bear its brunt?

British Devaluation

English trade unions, generally, are displaying a high quality of statesmanship in the face of present economic difficulties. Devaluation was deliberately undertaken to lower our prices abroad and, by making things more expensive at home, reduce a rate of consumption that we cannot afford.

Although Sir Stafford Cripps hesitates to put the truth in those blunt terms, trade union leaders are displaying more courage and wisdom. They recommend the suspension of arrangements whereby wages must always follow prices upward. It will be useful to recall the experience of other countries after World War I, whose union leadership was not of our quality, and who were consequently wrecked on this same rock of wages and prices.

The Socialist government of Austria adjusted wages to the cost of living index figure every month, and destroyed the currency completely in less than four years. I have a note for 10,000 crowns, issued by the Austro-Hungarian Bank on November 2, 1918, which promises to pay on demand "metallgelde." That note, on the day of its issue, was worth 1250 pounds and four years later was handed to me as part of the change from a single English pound. This tragedy surpassed in human suffering the earlier experience of the fiat money of France, and yet a few months later Germany, protesting that she never would, followed exactly the same course and collapsed.

In the last 10 years our prices and wages have doubled and more; prices have led the way, wages have followed behind and we have enough experience on which to found a serious reconsideration of the whole process. Trade union policy, framed long ago in the cause of the underdog, is obviously out of place at a time when organized labor is by far the most powerful force in the country. In the past, increases of wages have been designed to reduce employers' profits, to adjust social inequalities, to punish the rich and, generally, to secure for the workers the lion's share of the national cake. None of those purposes remains to be accomplished.

On the showing of the Austrian crown, and the German mark, it is not impossible for our exchange to reach 100,000 pounds to a single dollar, but happily for us the trade unions are now learning better.

"The Defensive in War"

Regarding your editorial, November 25, "The Defensive in War," I have no desire to detract from the excellence of many of Dr. Vannevar Bush's comments in his new book, Modern Arms and Free Men. Nonetheless, I suggest it is most important to set down a basic and fundamental error in this volume, an error the more important because it is reflected in the minds of many of our countrymen.

Historically, the defensive and the offensive in warfare have been engaged in a contstant race, the one ahead for a few months or even several years, then the other. A steel land mine is invented, then a detector to render it harmless, then a plastic mine invalidates the detector, then perhaps a "flail" tank is used to detonate the plastic mine, ad infinitum—this is the story of weapons progress which history has repeated a thousand times.

As of this date, the defensive may be a few steps in the lead, if we accept Dr. Bush's contentions, but the fact that defensive weapons are today more powerful than offensive is but a guarantee that the roles will be soon reversed, as science and technology work to counteract the predominance of the defense.

Under these conditions, I suggest it would be a calamitous error to attempt to formulate long-range American foreign policy or long-range American strategic policy on the false doctrine of a permanent superiority of defensive weapons. Such a false doctrine merely establishes a Maginot Line of the mind for that Maginot Line of pillboxes and gun emplacements which so tragically failed the French people in 1940. R. M. S.

Miss Truman's Concert

It is encouraging to find on your staff a consistently honest music critic. Honesty in criticism is all too rare in Washington. A field of art can be immeasurably damaged by dishonest evaluation. Mr. Hume is to be praised for insisting on high standards regardless of the performer.

It is discouraging that a singer as unfinished as Miss Truman is encouraged to make public appearances, when there are many fine young singers in the United States today who cannot be heard because they do not have the advantage of Miss Truman's exceptional circumstances.

Mr. Hume is rendering a valuable public service in calling attention to unreadiness in a performer, as well as in his continuing recognition of the strides forward the National Symphony is making this season under Mr. Mitchell's direction.

German Unity

Several references have been made in editorials and articles to the situation concerning the Bonn government in Western Germany and the Pieck government in East Germany. These references say that Russia either has proposed or will propose that both the West and the East withdraw troops from Germany, and that this idea would have high propaganda value even though Russia would be leaving in East Germany a Russian-trained military force for domination of the whole on a totalitarian basis.

The question is, what proposal might be made for countering the Russian proposal and for the advancement of the democratic free form of government in Germany?

We might propose that either the Bonn government or the Pieck government should be the government for all of Germany, with the choice to be made by the German people in a free election. Since the Pieck government, from all indications, would not get more votes than the Bonn government even in East Germany, there would be nothing for the West to fear from such a proposal, and Russia would not care to consent to this approach. That, however, would place the propaganda shoe on the other foot. READER.

Art For the Sesqui

Your November 25 editorial, "Toward a Theater," is evidence of your keen understanding of the need of stimulating the work of amateurs. The universities are, as you say, the reservoir from which the theater must draw its talent.

May I venture to suggest another field in which the universities would be able to enrich the Sesquicentennial visitors' experience? I refer to the whole field of art: painting, water color, sculpture and the like.

There are about 75 art schools maintained as parts of universities or art institutes. The best student work from these art schools would make first of all an interesting exhibition for the entertainment of visitors. Such showing would also be a prized recognition of the amateur artist. The identification of art objects with particular universities would serve to compare the work of different schools.

If this suggestion appeals to you, maybe you will wish to pass it on to the appropriate Sesquicentennial officials.

Recruiting Eight-Ballers

By Malvina Lindsay

It May Come To This

THE SPEAKER wore an unfamiliar uniform—so subdued and lacking in swagger it could have passed for a business suit. But on his chest was an array of service ribbons.

For a moment his well-fed, well-tailored masculine audience, which had just put away filet mignons and accessories, thought he was a foreign military officer. But his first ringing words were: "Men, Uncle Sam needs you! See your nearest recruiting officer at once!"

The listeners surprisedly glanced at each other's solid girths and receding hairlines, "I'm calling for volunteers," declaimed the speaker, "for a national service in which there is a waiting list of high-sounding important titles as 'chairman,' 'director,' 'coordinator.' Also waiting are spacious mahogany furnished offices with corps of secretaries. Yet, I must warn you this is the most difficult, dangerous dare-devil and unrewarding service in our Nation.

"I can't even promise you," went on the speaker, "that you will see the world, get an education, learn a trade, pick up a hobby, spend your off-duty at famous resorts, meet pretty girls in recreation huts, or accumulate a good pension for retirement. I can't offer you the opportunity for building honorable and secure careers. In fact, you may be kicked out, or verbally burned at the stake any time without notice."

"I MUST frankly tell you," he went on, "that no other service of the Nation makes such demands as this. Yet it gives the man who survives it the assurance that everything in life thereafter, including an atomic war, will seem child's play.

"It means grueling work frequently around the clock. It means being detoured off the main job at least three fourths of the time into trivial by-paths. It means spending hours, days, weeks, months explaining to high officials, members of Congress, questioning citizens, why you did this, why you didn't do that, why you said or did something or didn't say or do something 10, 20, 40 years ago.

"This calls for men of greater bravery than Daniel. You will not only have to stand up to lions, but to stampeding herds of elephants and donkeys. You will have to make decisions, start actions that will bring embattled legions of labor and of management advancing upon you.

"You will hear yourseves denounced, ridiculed, vilified, accused on the floors of Congress. You will be called before congressional committees, put on dunce stools under klieg lights, questioned and reprimanded as if you were fifth-grade boys. You will find yourselves labeled by those with access to public eye and ear as failure, weaklings, rascals, traitors, shysters, grafters, stooges of capital or of labor. You will be rumored every other day as being asked for your resignations. Your offices will buzz with reports that you are on the way out. You will get 50 nasty letters from the public to every pat on the back.

YOU WILL carry loads of responsibility weightier than that of Atlas and have no superiors or underlings to whom you can pass the buck. You will see yourselves and family getting older by the minute and your resources for the future shrinking.

"What is more, entry into this grueling, dangerous, service is more difficult than joining a Union League Club. To qualify, your looks, your associates, your thoughts from prenatal days must be passed on by a Procrustean jury of legislators.

"Do I see a hand raised to join? No! Yet, my fellow Americans, this is the top patriotic service of the Nation. It is where the qualified man is most needed and hardest to find. And there have been some brave and tough enough to stand in the firing line in the high civilian posts for our Government. I speak as a veteran wounded many times in action. Here is my badge of thrombosis, here my ribbon for a fall I sustained saving a fellow official from a plunge into a river, here one for a nervous collapse, here one for hallucinations of imbecility.

"But let me say this—I would do it again. Somebody has to do it. Think of the future satisfaction of having volunteered for the hardest job, the one most needed to be done. Think of the heritage you will pass to your children.

"That is why we have created this service and this uniform. Join up and some day your descendants will boast of the bravest, patriotic ancestors of all Americans — those who were daredevil enough to volunteer for the U. S. Eight Ball Corps."

Airport Traffic

Landing and take-off hazards in Washington would be materially reduced if only north and southbound traffic used the National Airport and both Anacostia and Bolling Fields were used exclusively for civilian east and westbound traffic. The Army and Navy could build a bigger and better combined airplane base in a more strategic position—away from the traffic congestion above Washington. It is probable this arrangement will come about sometime in the future and many lives might be saved if it were done immediately. SAFETY FIRST.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Johnson And The Germans

SECRETARY of Defense Louis Johnson's statement that "the United States has no intention of rearming Germany" may be true—for the present. But the fact should be noted that Johnson's statement flies flat in the face of the professional assessment of the Western military German rearmament has been generally regarded as a wicked project of the American and British military men. But the fact is that both French general staff chief Georges Revers and Western Union ground commander de Lattre de Tassigny, who bitterly disagree on everything else, agree on purely military grounds that there must be some degree of German rearmament. Both recently said as much to a leading American Senator with close French conlections. De Tassigny's view, moreover, presumably reflects the assessment of Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery's Western Union staff.

The fact is that all the Western military chiefs are convinced that the defense of western Europe is likely to prove enormously difficult, in case of war, without German ground troops. They are wholly convinced that the defense of Germany itself is totally impossible without German troops. This conviction is underlined by the news that the Russians are now preparing to build a German army of their own in their zone of Germany.

THIS military assessment has obvious politica' implications. The Germans themselves are quite as conscious as the Western military men that in case of war they simply cannot be defended from the East German army and the Red army itself by the Western nations. As long as the Germans know that they are totally exposed, there is an obvious danger, which will grow rather than decrease with time. This is that the Germans will try to make a deal, at whatever price, with their future conquerors.

A Germany controlled by or allied to the Soviet Union would be a catastrophe which could result only in war or a surrender by the West. The informed French are as aware of this as their British and American colleagues. Yet it is French opinion which makes the aternative—some degree of German rearmament — impossible "at this time." Indeed, Johnson's statement was obviously designed primarily for French consumption. Here the dilemma of Western military planning comes full circle.

The French attitude springs not only from a traditional—and natural—fear of Germany. It springs also from fear of Russia. While the Russians have been preparing to build their own German army, they have been carrying on an effective psychological offensive. Their satellite diplomats have been hinting widely that rearmament of Germany by the West would be considered a casus belli by the Soviet Union. Try to rearm Germany, the line has been, and the Red army will sweep to the Atlantic.

THIS phychological offensive has been effective for a simple reason. The Red army is still quite capable of sweeping to the Atlantic, and every Frenchman knows it. Moreover no Frenchman is yet convinced that the United States really intends to help make the defense of the Continent feasible, or really intends to join in the defense of the Continent. The French military chiefs themselves believe that in case of war the British will make for Dunkirk, and the Americans, if they ever arrive at all, for Cherbourg or another port.

This French defeatism has in turn undermined the attempt to build a defense for western Europe to which the French must clearly contribute the bulk of the ground troops—probably at least 30 divisions. And this is why the American Government has recently been approached at the highest level with requests for an informal but firm commitment to the French. This commitment would be that the American strategic concept calls for the defense of the Continent and that American forces will participate in that defense.

The fact is that the question of rearming the Germans is only a part of the larger question of defending the Western world as a whole—including the United States. It is quite obvious that it would be suicidally dangerous to rearm the Germans while the other European nations are pathetically feeble and the United States is gutting its defense program. All the military experts are agreed that the first priority must be given to building real military strength in the United States and among its European allies.

But no really serious effort to do this is being made. And because not enough is being done to give the French military reassurance, it is necessary to make political concessions to the French. And these concessions are in turn dangerous. For it may in the end become a hard necessity to include some measure of German rearmament, within the larger framework of the Western military structure, and under firm Western control. This is certainly at best a dark and dangerous prospect. But the plain fact is that Russian rearmament of eastern Germany will probably leave us in the end no alternative to arming Western Germany. And it is about time some plain facts were faced.

British Debts

By Marquis Childs

Refunding For India And Pakistan

LONDON.—One of the most important features of the British-American talks held in Washington in September is only just now becoming apparent. This is the three-way deal that holds the hope for British recovery at least potentially as great as the Marshall Plan aid.

Childs

Both American and British sources are cautious in their references to it, since it has not yet taken final form. But, nevertheless, outlines of what can become a major development already are clear.

During the Washington talks, Foreign Minister Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Cripps both impressed on Secretary of State Acheson the grave handicap to recovery of the British debt to the Far East and Middle East incurred during the war. The largest amounts are owed to India and Pakistan. Both are new nations in urgent, if not desperate, need of capital investment in order to expand their economy and thereby prevent unemployment, chaos and communism.

In consequence, the pressure on Britain has been great. British manufacturers find it easy to send goods to that noncompetitive market. One competent American observer expressed the belief that virtually all of Britain's increased exports have gone to that area. While the British say this is incorrect, it is undoubtedly true that a large proportion of the increased export has been absorbed by sterling debts.

PROJECTED in Washington talks now being pushed was the prospect of a major long-term loan by the United States for the development of India and Pakistan. Those nations would then be asked to scale down the sterling debt and refund it in such a way that it would not be a drag during the next few years on the British effort to bring exports and imports into balance.

This prospect was discussed at least tentatively with Prime Minister Nehru both in Washington and when he stopped in London on his return journey to India. It is a most sensitive point with India, since the suspicion long has been growing that the debt would be permanently frozen. But indications are that the burden on Britain could be relieved if substantial help is forthcoming from the United States.

As viewed by high officials here, the salutary effect of such an arrangement would be felt not merely in Britain but throughout the European continent. Countries of southeast Asia would distribute orders for machines and other capital goods in western Europe. The machines would be paid for in dollars provided by the American loan, and dollars earned that way would go to help cure the European deficit.

This is stressed here because at the time of the Washington talks the French took with wild alarm the reports that the United States intended to adopt a new and special relationship with Britain and the Commonwealth which would leave continental Europe isolated. There was never any substantial reason for this fright, which has, unhappily, prejudiced the relationship between the two nations. The fact of the French fear is one reason for their cautious approach to the three-way deal and for keeping it in confidence on the highest level of the three governments.

THE STERLING debt to India, as given in unofficial figures, is $1,820,000,000. For Pakistan the unofficial figure is 420 million dollars. The sterling balance held by Egypt is 840 million dollars and with Australia it is 664 million dollars.

Even for the smaller undeveloped territories the debt is substantial. For the group of colonies including Malaya and Singapore the sterling balance is unofficially put at 280 million dollars; for Iraq, 168 million; for Burma, 70 million; for Israel, 70 million, and for Iran between 55 and 60 million. The British debt is seriously hampering the development factor in this area and is a constant source of political irritation and Communist propaganda.

Before the war, sterling balances held in the Far East and Middle East were always sizable since London was the banker for the whole area. But they were nothing like the amounts held today, the increase representing almost entirely loans advanced for materials and men to prosecute the war.

In August, 1939, the total outstanding sterling balance in all the world was $1,300,000,000 (at the present rate of $2.80 to the pound). On June 30 of this year the total balance was $3,200,000,000. Although most of the repayments have gone to India and Pakistan, nearly half the total today still is owed to southeast Asia and the Middle East.

In his broadcast on devaluation and in subsequent debate in the House of Commons, Mr. Cripps made no mention of these figures. But they hover like a black cloud over the British fiscal policy and also—and even more important—over the efforts to keep Asia and the Middle East out of the Communist orbit. With good will and without any appreciable additional burden on the American taxpayer for foreign assistance, it should be possible to remove what is an intolerable drag on world recovery and reconstruction.

Bridges Tied By Witness to 1934 Violence

San Francisco, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—A Government witness testified today that Harry Bridges, West Coast longshoremen's chief, and a codefendant in his perjury trial, met with Earl Browder to discuss the bloody 1934 waterfront strike in San Francisco.

John H. Schomaker, former business agent to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO), said Bridges, Browder and Henry Schmidt—the last a member of Bridges' union—met on a Santa Clara County ranch.

Browder was the Communist presidential candidate for years before the party purged him. The Government is seeking to prove that Bridges, Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, another ILWU official, lied to conceal Bridges' Red affiliation so he could become an American citizen.

"We all discussed the strike and the future conduct of it," Schomaker said. "Browder mentioned there was 'quite a bit of terror' used by police . . . tear gas and clubs and things like that. He said what was needed was to line up support of the people."

As the Bridges trial entered its third week, Schomaker testified that he had delivered a Communist Party card to Bridges in January, 1936, anad had "many times" seen him pay party dues.

Cross-examination of Schomaker drew an admission that during the depression the maritime industry hired "star gangs" who would "kick back whisky and other things."

Vincent Hallinan, defense counsel, contended that San Francisco waterfront conditions were "terrible and lousy."

Tobin Urges Liberalization Of Jobless Pay

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin yesterday urged liberalization of unemployment insurance benefits.

The Secretary, speaking before the 16th National Conference on Labor Legislation, called for higher weekly jobless payments, longer periods of payment, and broader program coverage.

He also said that the time has come to establish certain Nationwide minimum standards for the strengthening of the unemployment insurance program, and that, accordingly, the Department of Labor is planning to seek congressional action for such standards.

The conference, representing labor officials from 40 states, the District, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rica, opened a three-day meeting yesterday at the Interdepartmental Auditorium. The participants will discuss advancement of employment opportunities, wage and hour legislation, industrial safety and health, child labor, and migrant labor.

Tobin told the conference that he has become increasingly concerned with the need for improving the Federal-State jobless insurance system. He said originally the program was meant to provide the unemployed wage earner with roughly 50 percent of his normal weekly pay, but that the increase in the cost of living has cut the payments to about ore third of weekly salary.

President Truman, in a message read to the conference, commented:

MEDALLION PRESENTED—Eugene Meyer (right), chairman of the board of The Washington Post, receives from Benjamin Ourisman, member of the board of the Jewish Community Center, a replica of the medallion on a plaque which hangs at the JCC. The original, dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, was unveiled December 14, 1948, in "grateful appreciation" for the couple's donation of a new $133,000 wing to the center, 16th and Q sts. nw. Witnessing the presentation yesterday are (from left) Morris Cafritz, a member of the board of the Jewish Community Center; Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the center, and Fred S. Kogod, president of the center's board of directors

Plaque Given To Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer

The board of directors of the Jewish Community Center yesterday paid tribute to Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post Co., and his wife, Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, "for their generous contributions to the center."

The board presented him with a mounted replica of the medallion on a plaque in honor of the couple which hangs on the wall of the center at 16th and Q sts. nw. The ceremony took place in Meyer's office.

The original bronze plaque, dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, was unveiled on December 14, 1948, in "grateful appreciation" for their donation of a six-story $135,000 recreational wing at the center.

Donors of the wing, which was completed in 1939, remained anonymous until dedication of the plaque last year.

The recreational wing, center of activity for thousands of children and adults throughout the year, contains a library, canteen for teenagers, lecture and hospitality room, and a gymnasium.

Present for the ceremony were Fred S. Kogod, president of the board of directors; Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the center; Morris Cafritz and Benjamin Ourisman, members of the board.

Panama at Peace With Itself Again

Panama City, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Calm was restored in Panama today after a week which saw three Presidents occupy the same chair.

The only remaining signs of last week's general strike were the shutdown of National University and schools. Professors and student leaders decided to stay out until President Arnulfo Arias accepts the resignations of the three police chiefs blamed for the disturbance.

Decision on Coal Strike Is Due

late whether or not the soft coal miners, who returned to the pits under a temporary truce some three weeks ago after a 52-day strike for contract "improvements," would walk out again on the December 1 deadline.

There were all sorts of rumors that Lewis had stayed behind in Washington to dicker—secretly—with various leading coal operators. The operators have offered to continue the old contract with the UMW—which expired July 1—so long as Lewis would concede on a couple of conditions and on stricter administration of the miners' welfare fund. Lewis has been asking general "improvements" which he says will cost the operators 30 to 35 cents a ton.

Industry sources denied that there was—or would be—any break in the solid line of the operators. Government sources indicated that during the past several days there's been no contact between Federal officials and coal management or union. It appeared that the issue—to strike again or to continue the truce—was up to Lewis, and Lewis alone.

Truman Plan for Tax Hike Widely Opposed Over Nation

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29.—President Truman's plan to boost income taxes next year seems l likely to run into stiff public opposition.

To find out how the general public would view a tax boost at this time, interviewers for the Institute put the following "open" or "free answer" question to a cross-section of voters in all 48 States:

"President Truman says the United States Government is spending more money than it is taking in and, therefore, Federal income taxes must be raised next year. What is your opinion about raising Federal income taxes next year?

Views expressed by the voters interviewed fall into the following categories:

Against it, don't like it, oppose any increase	46%
Taxes already too high	22
	68%
General approval: raise if needed, Truman probably right	14
Cut Government expenses instead	8
Raise taxes on rich and corporations only	3
Miscellaneous	3
No opinion	7
	103%

(The total exceeds 100 percent because a few voters made more than one suggestion.)

Earlier this year, when President Truman was urging a four billion dollar tax boost, a substantial majority (75 percent) of voters questioned by the Institute opposed such a step. It was subsequently shelved by Congress.

Each person questioned in today's survey was also asked:

"Do you have any ideas about how the U. S. Government can cut expenses?"

Four principal suggestions were offered by voters as follows:

1. Cut out unnecessary bureaus, cut payroll.
2. Cut down on aid to Europe.
3. Follow the Hoover recommendations, reorganize the Government.
4. Cut appropriations all across the board.

Margin Right For Unlisted Stocks Urged

By S. Oliver Goodman

Amendment of the Securities Exchange Act to permit margin privileges for unlisted securities was urged last night by the National Association of Securities Dealers.

In a report adopted by the NASD board of governors at its fall meeting, the present restriction of margin rights to listed securities was regarded as "unjustifiable discrimination."

The board also recommended that Congress eliminate from the Securities Act of 1934 the provisions which permit extension of unlisted trading privileges on exchanges to securities not listed on any other exchange. The effect of this recommendation would be to make all securities either fully listed or in the over-the-counter markets.

The board went on record as favoring a provision in the Frear Bill (Senate Bill 2408) which would require all corporations having three million dollars or more in gross assets and at least 300 stockholders to report regularly on corportate affairs and to observe proxy rules.

DIVIDEND: Capital Transit Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on capital stock, payable December 20 to stock of record December 6. Similar dividends were paid in the first three quarters.

DODGE MEETING: L. L. Colbert, president of the Dodge division of Chrysler, will meet with Washington-Baltimore dealers at a breakfast conference today in the Mayflower. Representatives of dealerships and members of the factory regional staff will participate. Although Dodge passenger car production has been shut down since November 4 because of the steel shortage, Colbert said yesterday that Dodge has had one of its most successful years. Both production and sales, he reported, have been at an all-time high.

NET DROPS: Southern Railway Co. yesterday reported net income of $493,642 in October, compared with $1,510,485 in the same 1948 period. In common with other railroads, the coal strike was an unfavorable factor. For the first 10 months, Southern's net after all charges totaled $7,537,263 compared with $15,280,204 in the same period last year.

BANQUET: More than 175 of the men who handle your casualty and fire insurance got together last night in the Mayflower for the annual banquet of the District of Columbia Association of Insurance Agents. C. fire marshal; Capt. Charles C. Slayton, president of the Maryland Association of Insurance Agents; Howard Gates, chief of the rating bureau of the Maryland Insurance Department, and Vic Arthur, member of the executive committee of the National Association of Insurance Agents. The local association resulted from the merger five years ago of the Insurance Club of Washington and the D. C. Insurors Association.

BULBS APLENTY: Christmas tree light bulbs will glow the brightest this year since prewar days. A Westinghouse estimate indicated yesterday that American manufacturers have ready a mountain of 400 million of the colored miniature bulbs, enough to supply 11 to each of this nation's 36½ million electrified homes. This is the first Yuletide that the bulbs have been plentiful since 1941.

ODD LOTS: District Theatres Corp. voted the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a common share, payable January 3 to stock of record December 15 . . . Business bankruptcies in the week ended November 24 declined to 148, lowest figure in 11 weeks, Dun & Bradstreet reported . . . Directors of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. deferred action on the common dividend normally up for consideration at this time and changed future dividend payment dates . . . An underwriting group headed by Halsey, Stuart Co. was awarded a 41-million-dollar bond issue of Louisville Gas & Electric Co. and will reoffer it at 102⅜ to yield 2.635 percent . . . Southern Co. awarded 1,500,000 shares of additional common stock to a syndicate headed by Lehman Brothers on a bid of $11.58¼ a share. Reoffering is planned at $11.95 a share.

Business Outlook

In 1929 It Was Called Margin; Now You 'Invest on Credit'

By J. A. Livingston

BUYING stocks and bonds on margin is coming back. But not in the brash 1929 manner. In 1949, you don't expect to double or triple your money and put yourself on Easy Street. Nothing quite so sensational as that. You're merely going to increase your income—in a dignified manner.

The New York Stock Exchange firm of Francis I. du Pont & Co. calls this new technique "investing on credit." In its monthly brochure, Market Pointers, the du Pont firm observes: "Too often the investor will seek to employ his funds in speculative issues to increase his income to a desired level. This results in the sacrifice of quality." So du Pont offers a way to earn more income without sacrificing quality.

Livingston

You do it by going into debt. Suppose a man or woman has $2000 invested in common stocks and receives dividends of $120 a year, or 6 percent. Suppose he wanted to boost that income. He could do it by selling out his holdings and buying securities which pay him higher returns. That, however, would entail greater risk. The dividends mightn't be quite so safe. Instead, suggests du Pont, he could "trade on his credit."

He could borrow $600 and buy more stock. True, he'd haye to pay interest on the borrowed money—say 4 percent, or $24. But if his additional stock paid 6 per cent, he'd get an additional $36. Net gain, $12 in income per year. So he'd have raised his total income from $120 to $132. And if he were to borrow $1000, instead of $600, he'd be able to raise his income from $120 to $140. The more you borrow, the higher the increased return.

CANTOR, Fitzgerald & Co., Inc. an investment firm, offers another investing-on-credit technique. You buy high-grade municipal bonds on 10 percent margin. Suppose you purchase 10 New York City Housing Authority 2.9 percent bonds at $1040 per bond. You put up $1500 and borrow $8,900 to pay the balance. Cantor, Fitzgerald will negotiate the loan for you at 2 percent. Your income each year from the bonds will amount to $290. You'd pay interest of $178 on the $8900 loan. The net return of $112 on the $1500 you put up would come to about 7.5 percent per year.

Unfortunately, no investment's a sure thing. When you buy stocks, regardless of how fine the stocks may be, you assume the risk of market fluctuations. And when you borrow to buy, you pyramid those risks. In that respect, 1929 and 1949 are identical. Suppose, for example, you buy $3000 of stocks, with $2000 of your own and $1000 of borrowed capital. If the market declines 10 percent, your $2000 has shrunk to $1700, or 15 per cent. If the market drops 30 percent, your $2000 is down to $1100, or 45 percent.

THE purchase of bonds, even high-grade municipals, is subject to similar hazards. Suppose the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board were to decide that interest rates were too low. Suppose the Reserve Board sold some Government bonds, and suppose interest rates then advanced. The effect would be to lower the price of high-grade bonds. Any person who borrowed 90 percent on municipals would then face a margin call. He'd have to put up more money, or he'd be sold out.

The recent strength in the stock and bond markets has created a new confidence. More and more people are looking at skimpy yields on Government bonds and savings accounts and wondering: How can I get a higher return? All very well. But it's important to realize that on Wall Street, as on Market Street or Main Street, you never get something for nothing.

When you go for a high return, you sacrifice safety. Obversely, when you go for safety, you sacrifice return. And no matter how you sugar-name it, a debt is still a debt—and a risk.

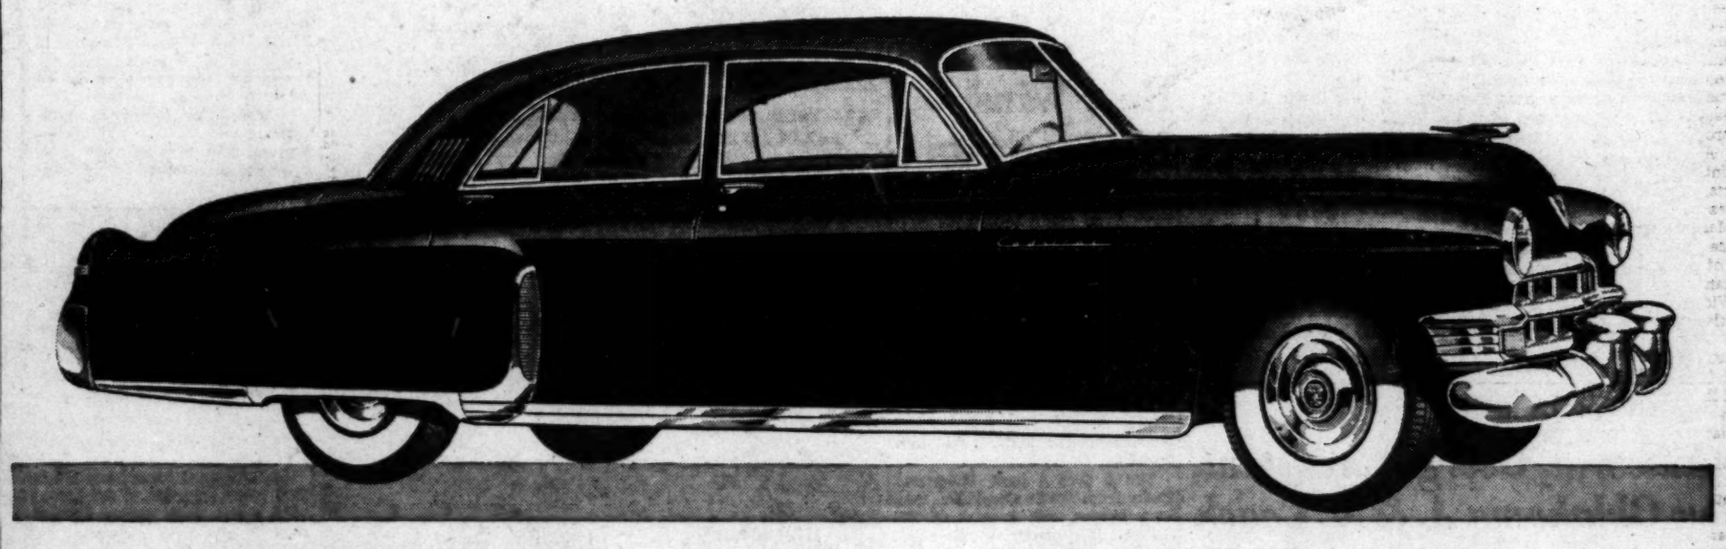
Greatest Compliment a Car Ever Had!



NUMBERED AMONG THE HAPPIEST Cadillac owners are many, many dealers who sell and service other well-known makes of cars.

They feel perfectly free to avail themselves of Cadillacs because they know that all the world holds Cadillac in a class apart. Hence, it is no reflection on the cars they sell when they seek, for themselves and their families, the exclusive advantages which "the Standard of the World" provides.

This, of course, is the greatest compliment a motor car ever had—and the respect upon which it is founded has been fifty years in the building. Throughout all this time, there has been the strictest adherence to the highest ideals of engineering and production. Not once has the inflexible rule of quality been eased for a single day.

It is a wonderful thing to own such a car. It is a wonderful thing to drive it—to relax in it—and to have it as a cherished possession. All in all, it enhances the enjoyment of the whole day's activities.

We think you would sense all this—and more—after an hour or so at the wheel. Why not come in some day, quite soon—for a ride that's a revelation? We should be happy to have you any time.

With Shirley Povich

THE NEWS OUT of Baltimore yesterday was of the kind to make the National Football League people choke on their own snickers. The financial plight of the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference was horribly exaggerated, it seems. The franchise isn't going to fold, all its debts are paid and its troubles are trivial compared to the travail of some clubs in the NFL.

Sure, the team wound up with a loss of "slightly under $100,000" by admission of Walter Driskill, the general manager, but its 192 stockholders are rolling nicely with that rap, and ready to bankroll the club for seasons to come.

POVICH

"Nobody has been hurt badly," says Driskill. "The 20 chief stockholders are picking up most of the check without griping. We still think its the best football town in the country. We're proud of the fact that our average crowd was 25,000 who came out to see a team that won only 1 of its 12 games. If we could have won four games, there'd have been no deficit."

Then how about Driskill's plea for help, which sounded mighty like putting the team on the town when he asked Baltimoreans to support it by buying 50,000 titickets at $5 each for an exhibition game next fall?

"BALTIMORE FANS will buy those 50,000 tickets, too," enthused Driskill. "It was no abject appeal for help. We weren't going to them with our hats in our hands. We've always emphasized that the Colts are a community team, and no losing club has ever been supported by the fans as well as ours. We'll have $250,000 in the bank before the season opens. That doesn't sound as if we're in distress, does it?"

No job of salesmanship ever got off to a faster start. Within 24 hours after the 50,000-ticket plan was announced, 20,000 of the seats were sold. "Mayor D'Allesandro himself contracted for 10,000 of 'em," said Driskill. "That demonstrates the kind of support the city is giving the team. There never was any idea that the Colts would fold."

Nowhere in the AAC was there anything as catastrophic as the New York Bulldogs failure in the NFL, Driskill points out. "Our lowest club was the Chicago Hornets which averaged more than 17,000 fans per home game, and the Packers and Bulldogs in the other league were below the Hornets. The Bulldogs averaged less than 9000 per home game and one man, Ted Collins, had to absorb the whole loss. More teams in the NFL are crying for help than in our league."

AS FOR THE pro football business, the NFL got there fustest, but not with the most money, Driskill points out. "Club for club, we're financially more able to sweat it out than they are," he said. "Men like Ernest Lindheimer, Tony Morabito, Jim Brueil, Arthur McBride and Dan Topping don't run away from reverses. Our whole league is financially sounder than it ever was, and we'll be a better operation in 1950."

It is significant that the AAC will hold its next league meeting at Houston, Tex., on December 15. The club owners will foregather there two days before its champion team meets a team of league All-Stars for the benefit of Millionaire Glenn McCarthy's pet charities. They'll play at the Rice Stadium with tickets selling at $15 each in a stadium seating 30,000. The Damon Runyon Cancer Fund, a national youth foundation and a Houston charity will split the proceeds.

Out of that Houston conclave will probably come the league's eighth team to give it better balance. And the backer is expected to be McCarthy, who nurses a pique against the NFL for its refusal to participate in the charity. McCarthy would give the AAC an even bigger tilt over the NFL in financial dominance.

ACTUALLY, says Driskill, the Colts don't have to produce anything like $250,000 before December 15 to show the AAC it is stable, despite published reports of such a demand. "That $250,000 is just a figure that is being used," he says. "The AAC merely asks that men of financial responsibility underwrite the team and promise to keep it debt free, and there have always been Baltimore men ready to meet those terms."

The Chicago Hornets are admittedly a liability to the AAC, cast as they are in competition with the Bears and Cardinals for the Chicago patronage, and playing in Soldiers Field, a stadium that is one of the world's worst. But the NFL has a pair of weak spots of its own to give it concern, specifically in New York and Green Bay.

The Green Bay Packers, once an NFL powerhouse, have been bypassed as an asset with their small stadium that holds little hope the team can break even in these days of inflated expenses and payrolls. And in New York, Collin's Bulldogs are in a hopeless spot, vying with the Giants and the AAC Yankees for customers. In five home games, they could attract only 45,000 fans and sometimes it appeared the front office was counting ears, not noses.

Given 3-Year Contract

Whitworth, Georgia Assistant, New Oklahoma A. & M. Coach

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Oklahoma A. and M. College athletic council announced tonight it had closed a deal with J. B. (Ears) Whitworth to become head football coach at A. and M.

Whitworth now is line coach at the University of Georgia.

His selection came after two meetings today attended by the A. and M. athletic cabinet, the board of regents for A. and M. colleges, and college officials.

Whitworth told Athletic Director Henry P. Irba by telephone from Athens:

"We will use the spread T formation—which Georgia now uses. That will be, of course, subject to variations dictated by the personnel on hand."

Terms of the contract were not announced, but reportedly it calls for three years as head coach at A. and M. Whitworth, 41, is the Cowpokes' twelfth head coach in the past 48 years.

The Presidents Speak

Ike Tells Columbia to Win; Stassen Backs Up Munger

NEW YORK, NOV. 29 (AP).—Gen. Dwight (Ike) Eisenhower called upon Columbia University today to build up a winning football team.

"I'd like to see Columbia athletics reach as high a level as Columbia's academics," the university president told the twenty-ninth varsity "C" Club gathering tonight.

The occasion was the awarding of letters to 138 athletes in 11 sports.

EISENHOWER, leader of Allied armies in World War II, called upon students and alumni to support Coach Lou Little in rebuilding Columbia's football fortunes. Columbia lost seven games and won two the past season.

He said he would like to see victories replace defeats and added: "I like to run over the other guy as much as he likes to run over me."

Stassen Acclaims Munger's 'Great Job' at Penn

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29 (AP).—President Harold Stassen of the University of Pennsylvania gave his unqualified support to Football Coach George Munger and his staff tonight at the annual dinner for the football team:

"Munger did a great job and I will take George ahead of anybody except the late Knute Rockne."

There have been reports that Munger would not be back next season because of this season's record of four wins and four defeats.

PGA Tables Locke Case, Still Bars Middlecoff

Southern Pines, N. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Professional Golfers' Association tabled the hot Bobby Locke case tonight after a lengthy discussion.

The case of Locke, South African pro who was barred from participating in PGA-sponsored tournaments last summer, was pigeonholed apparently in expectation of receipt of a letter from Locke applying for reinstatement.

The association voted against allowing any professional to become eligible for membership after two years as a recognized tournament circuit player.

Pro Must Serve Five Years

The association's constitution makes it necessary for a professional to serve five years either as a club pro or on the circuit before becoming eligible for membership.

A resolution to amend the constitution allowing tournament players to come into the association after two years under a new Class I membership was defeated by a 43-26 vote.

This, in effect, bars Cary Middlecoff, National Open champion, from joining the organization at this time. He is in his third year of professional competition, and recently signed as professional at the Ormond Beach, Fla., club.

The PGA closed its tournaments to Locke when he allegedly backed out of bookings in this country after winning the British Open.

The meeting was told that several American Ryder Cup players had withdrawn from previously scheduled appearances in Britain following the cup matches last summer and that on other occasions in this country star players had not competed in tournaments after having been billed.

The parallel of their case to Locke's was cited by the Carolinas section with a suggestion that a consistent policy be adopted.

Ryder Cup Play Expensive

Tournament Bureau Manager George Schneiter told the association that unless the Ryder Cup competition between this country and England can be made to stand on its own feet financially it should be dropped.

In his report to the delegates and executive committee, Schneiter said that the trip to England of the victorious American team last summer cost about $25,000, of which about $12,000 had to come from the association's general fund.

The Ryder Cup fund, he said, had about $8000 on the credit side and an additional $5000 was contributed by Robert A. Hudson, Portland (Oreg.) tournament sponsor.

Busy Schedule Ahead

In making his tournament committee report, Schneiter said that the PGA schedule for the year ending next month showed 41 tournaments, eight of them pro-amateur affairs, and a total purse in excess of $474,000.

He said that the winter tour opening December 8 at Miami, Fla., and ending with the Augusta Masters early in April listed 19 events, two of them pro-amateurs, with $175,000 in prize money.

Hart Wins Heisman Cup

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Leon Hart, Notre Dame's great end, had another honor heaped upon his broad back tonight when he was announced as the winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy for being "the outstanding college football player of 1949."

The award is made annually by the Downtown A. C. which polls sports writers and broadcasters throughout the Nation on their selection.

The 6 feet 4 inch, 265-pound husky from Turtle Creek, Pa., won in a breeze with a total of 975 points. In second place came Charles (Choo Choo) Justice, North Carolina's fine back, with 272 points. Doak Walker, Southern Methodist's triple threat back who won the Heisman Trophy last year, was third with 229 followed by Arnold Galiffa, Army, 196 and Bob Williams of Notre Dame, 189.

He is the second lineman to capture the Heisman prize in the 15 years the trophy has been awarded. Larry Kelley, Yale's famed end, won it in 1936. Hart also is the third Notre Dame player to bring home the silver. Angelo Bertelli came home first in 1943 and Johnny Lujack won it in 1947.

Walker Denies Resigning From Wake Forest

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 29 (AP). Coach D. C. (Peahead) Walker said today that rumors he is quitting as head football coach at Wake Forest are untrue.

Walker took cognizance of rumors that have persisted for several days by issuing this statement:

"I have not resigned here nor accepted a position elsewhere. My present contract has two years to run. I have not talked with any institution with regard to coaching elsewhere nor given serious thought to coaching a professional football team."

One of the most persistent rumors was that he would resign at Wake Forest to coach the Washington Redskins professional team.

Jim La Rue Passes Up Chance To Tie Poole's Playing Mark

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BARNEY POOLE'S college football longevity record is safe.

Jimmy LaRue of Maryland had a chance to tie it next season with another year of eligibility but he's decided to call it quits after a six-year career at three different schools.

Poole, often referred to as the most experienced player in college football history, played seven years at Army and Ole Miss before turning pro this season.

LaRue, 24-year-old Oklahoma-born halfback for the Terrapins, put in one season at Carson-Newman, two at Duke and completes his third at Maryland January 2 against Missouri in the Gator Bowl.

"If I can't beat Poole's record, I'm not interested in tying it," LaRue explained.

ALL TOLD, LaRue has played football for 10 years. He played one year of junior high football, three in senior high and is now rounding out his sixth year of college activity.

Like Poole's four years at Army, LaRue's first three years of college ball didn't count, speaking from an eligibility viewpoint. He enrolled in the Navy's V-12 program and was assigned to Carson-Newman College in 1943.

The following two seasons, while still in the Navy, he lugged the leather for Duke, playing in the 1944 Duke-Alabama Sugar Bowl game. His 27-yard run in the last minute of the game set up the touchdown which enabled the Blue Devils to squeeze by Alabama, 29 to 27.

HE WAS at sea in 1946, but was back in football in 1947 at Maryland.

"I wanted to enroll in Oklahoma," he pointed out, "but the conference has a rule against players with a college degree playing. I'd heard, of Tatum at Oklahoma, called him at Maryland and decided to enroll."

LaRue received his A.B. in education in 1945 at Duke while still in the Navy. He has his masters and is now working on his doctorate.

Now that he'd decided his playing days are over—the 165-pounder has no idea of playing pro football—he wants to coach. And he'll probably land a job right at College Park with Maryland.

Oklahoma Edges Out Cal for 2d

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—For the third time in the past four years, Notre Dame has been voted the Nation's No. 1 football power by sports writers and sportscasters taking part in the Associated Press poll.

In the ninth and final ballot of the '49 season, 172 out of 248 experts plumped for the fighting Irish from South Bend, who will be working on a 37-game undefeated string when they close against Southern Methodist on Saturday at Dallas.

Olkahoma's powerful Sooners nosed out California for second place, with Army fourth and Rice fifth. Michigan, which led the parade a year ago by a narrow margin over Notre Dame, dropped to seventh.

Figured on a point basis (10 for first place selection, 9 for second, etc.), Notre Dame topped the contenders with 2402, compared with 2018 for Olkahoma, 1900 for California 1833 for Army and 1063 for Rice.

California, idle last week after having clinched the Pacific Coast championship, polled more first-place votes than Oklahoma—40 to 18—but more widespread support for the Sooners booste' them past the Golden Bears into the second spot.

Maryland, Gator Bowl opponent of Missouri, is rated fourteenth, one place higher than Santa Clara's Orange Bowl team and two places higher than North Carolina's Cotton Bowl team.

The total final vote (first-place votes in parentheses):

1. Notre Dame (172)	2402
2. Oklahoma (18)	2018
3. California (40)	1900
4. Army (12)	1838
5. Rice	1062
6. Ohio State	998
7. Michigan	848
8. Minnesota	522
9. Louisiana State	516
10. College of Pacific (4)	248

The second ten.—11, Kentucky, 222; 12, Cornell, 188; 13, Villanova (2), 148; Maryland, 13; 15, Santa Clara, 128; 16, North Carolina, 106; 17, Tennessee, 82; 18, Princeton, 46; 19, Michigan State, 30; 20, Missouri and Baylor, each 20.

Others receiving votes—Virginia, 18; Duke, 14; Pennsylvania, 10; Stanford, 8; Wofford, Tulane, William and Mary and Southern Methodist, each 6; Texas, Texas Christian and North Carolina State, each 3; Dartmouth, Wyoming, Southern California, UCLA, Vanderbilt, each 2; Brown, Wake Forest and Xavier, each 1.

Greasy Neale Says Nobody On Irish Could Make Eagles

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Earl (Greasy) Neale, coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, said today no present Notre Dame player could make his National Football League club.

"They have some fine players, particularly Leon Hart," Neale said, "but it would require a year or so of professional experience for any of them to crowd aside our regulars."

Neale came to town as an advance man for his NFL champions, who meet the New York Giants in a league game Sunday.

Richmond Asks Berth in A-AC

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Richmond (Va.) Rebels of the American Football League have requested membership in the All-America Conference, Commissioner O. O. Kessing of the AAC announced today.

"I have taken it under consideration," Kessing said. "I told H. C. Siebold, owner of the Richmond club that I will have to bring the matter up before the owners at our annual league meeting in Houston, December 15-16."

Whelchel Charges Dismissed

Richmond, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—The question of whether a "little scuffle" between old friends on private property constitutes a public disturbance was resolved in favor of Rear Admiral John E. Welchel in Henrico Police Court today.

Charges of drunk and disorderly conduct against the ruddy-complexioned former football coach for the Naval Academy and, later, the Washington Redskins were dismissed. He was assessed court costs of $4.25, however.

Welchel had no comment to make on the disturbance which sent him to jail for 12 hours Monday morning.

The retired admiral's arrest came as the aftermath of a party celebrating the Richmond Rebels' professional football victory Sunday at the home of Rebels' Coach Keith Molesworth, an old friend of Whelchel's and a coaching associate at Navy.

Molesworth, showing a bruised nose under dark glasses, requested that the charges he preferred be dismissed. Earlier he said the police were called to his home to quell a dispute over whether Whelchel should be allowed to drive to his Virginia Beach home.

Henrico authorities said they had a bit of difficulty getting the admiral secured in jail. Later they released him on a cash bond of $250.

The case was heard in the offices of Justice R. Dixon Powers after the docket in the regular courtroom had been cleared.

Andrews Airmen Win

Al Bernardo scored 16 points to lead Andrews Air Force Base to a 54-48 win over the Army Medical Center last night at Walter Reed.

Caps' Vets Ready for Royal Game Here Tonight

Their best condition of the young National Basketball Association season will be enjoyed by the Washington Caps tonight when they entertain the Rochester Royals in an 8:30 clash at Uline Arena.

Back in shape are Veterans Bones McKinney and Freddie Scolari, both shackled by earlier injuries, and the Caps have high hopes of adding another scalp to that of the Fort Wayne Pistons, trounced by 93-76 on Saturday.

The Royals enter tonight's game with a record of seven wins against four defeats while the Caps have won 7 of 12 starts. Rochester has an average of 90 points plus per game, Washington 78 points while restricting the opposition to 75.

The Royals are introducing a new player tonight in Price Brookfield, acquired from the disbanded Indianapolis Jets, and two brilliant rookies in Jack Coleman and Frank Saul.

Coleman, 6-foot 7-inch, 230-pound former Louisville University scoring leader, is fourth among his team's pointmakers with an evarage of 10 per game and Saul, All-America at Seton Hall, sixth with 7.1.

Rochester's scoring is dominated by Arnold Risen, Bob Davies and Bob Wanzer, who have averaged 13.5, 12.1 and 11.1 points per game, respectively.

A Catholic Youth Organization preliminary opens tonight's action at 7:15 o'clock.

Fights Return To Garden Friday Night

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, NOV. 29 (NYHT). The drouth is ending in Madison Square Garden, the world's most celebrated blood pit, which has been regrettably lacking in gore these last two months while blue-blooded horses and blue-lipped ice skaters occupied the arena. On Friday evening, the firm of Octopus, Inc., dealers in assault-with-intent-to-do-bodily-harm, reopens for business with an entertainment involving Cesar Brion, a retreaded palace guardsman from Peron's Argentina, an undefeated Roland la Starza, a roller skater from the east Bronx.

Smith

These characters represent new blood in the fist fight industry, although, of course, how much of this commodity they will spill cannot be foretold. Their appearance at this time offers an interesting footnote on the changes which twelve months have wrought in the heavyweight division.

ON A comparable date in 1948—Let's abandon this pussyfooting and declare flatly that it was December 10—the Garden offered a match between Ezzard Charles and Joe Baksi. This was not brand, spang, shiny new merchandise, but if a promoter wanted to show heavyweights then he had to take Charles and Baksi, or Gus Lesnevich or Jersey Joe Walcott or Lee Savold. There wasn't anything else available; a year ago Brion was practically unknown in this country and La Starza was plodding through the preliminaries.

It does not necessarily follow that there are better heavyweights around now than there were a year ago. It may merely be that there are younger heavyweights deemed worthy of employment in main events. But that is progress of a sort.

Some of the resident tentacles of Octopus, Inc., were groping along this vein today and Murray Goodman, the arts and letters tentacle, pointed out the coincidence that both La Starza and Brion appeared on the Charles-Baksi card of a year ago.

"LA STARZA knocked out Gene Gosney," Mr. Goodman said, "and Brion flattened Gene Felton in six rounds."

"They've the both of them been winning this last year," Mr. Goodman said. "La Starza has had 36 fights and won 'em all. Brion had 104 bouts in the amateurs and he's won 28 out of 30 as a pro. And they're both 22 years old."

"Talk about coincdiences," Harry Markson added. "Rocky Marciano, who fights in the prelims, played baseball in Brockton and got a trial with the Chicago Cubs. But he was a catcher with a sore arm. He's fought some pretty good guys, like Dom Mogard."

"Marciano looks like a young Dempsey," Mr. Markson said recklessly.

"He learned to punch under water," Mr. Goodman said. "He practiced swinging—"

Mr. Markson turned a cold eye on Mr. Goodman and stared him to silence. Suddenly Mr. Markson looked very tired. In this fight business, you're going along swell and then somebody mentions a fighter going into the water. It wears you out.

Tech Plays W. & L.

Montgomery, W. Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—West Virginia Tech has added Washington and Lee to its basketball schedule this year, Coach Hugh Mosely said today. The game will be played January 9 at Lexington, Va.

Conerly Leads League In Passing

Two ball-carriers of the champion Philadelphia Eagles, Steve Van Buren and Bosh Pritchard, have easily outgained the entire Washington Redskins running corps, National Football League statistics show after 10 games of the 1949 season.

Van Buren turned in the greatest performance of his professional career Sunday, picking up 205 yards, to supplant Green Bay's Tony Canadeo as the league's top rusher with 997 yards in 225 trips with the ball. Pritchard ranks sixth with 406 yards.

In contrast to this brilliant pair's 1503 yards, Washington has picked up only 1359 yards along the ground.

The Redskins' greatest claim to statistical fame again involves Slingin' Sammy Baugh's passing performance. He rates second only to Chuck Conerly, New York Giant sophomore, although his 56.1 percentage of completions is the best in the league.

The Eagles, with their third straight Eastern title already clinched, lead in all but two of the 11 major statistical departments. In defense against rushing they trail the Chicago Bears by 5 yards and in yards gained passing they trail six teams.

In the individual standings, the Redskins aren't represented among the first 10 rushers, punt return leaders, or interception leaders.

Wingman Hugh Taylor ranks sixth among pass receivers with Tom Fears of Los Angeles out front with 60 caught for 793 yards. Taylor's 38 receptions for 690 yards have led to eight touchdowns, high in the league, but earning him no better than eighth among scorers. Leading in the point department is Gene Roberts of the Giants with 102 points.

Alabama-Auburn Alumni Gather Here Saturday

Two members of the Redskins, Harry Gilmer, of Alabama, and Leon Cochran, of Auburn, will be guests at the broadcast party of the Alabama-Auburn game at the Washington Hotel Saturday afternoon.

Presidents of the two schools will broadcast a special message to the alumni gathering in Washington at 2:45 before the kickoff.

Howard Cagers Beat Bolling

Howard University's Bisons, paced by Bill Sykes' 23 points, defeated Bolling Air Force Base, 58-50, for their second straight basketball win last night at Bolling. Frank Booth tallied 18 points for Howard.

Seymour Seitcheck, with 14 points, and Carroll Tarkington, with 11, were high for the losers.

Unbeaten Emory-Henry Footballers So Good They Play in Two Bowl Games This Season

Emory, Va., Nov. 29.—Bowl games are so plentiful these days that some football teams are accepting two bids in one season.

Emory and Henry, champion of the Smokey Mountain Conference, is an example. The Wasps, who hail from the southwestern-most tip of Virginia, swept to 10 straight victories during the regular season.

They thought they were finished when they defeated previously unbeaten Hanover (Ind.) College in the Burley Bowl, 32-0, a week ago. But now, they're practicing again, warming up for still another postseason appearance January 2 in the Orlando, Fla., Tangerine Bowl.

Their Tangerine opponent will be undefeated St. Vincent College of Latrobe, Pa.

In his second year as coach is Conley Snidow, a T-formation man, who played his college football at Roanoke. In his first year at the helm, Emory and Henry won only two out of ten. He had practically an all-freshman club.

This year, the same boys, sophs now, averaged better than five touchdowns per game in beating Concord, Milligan, Carson-Newman, Hampden Sydney, Guilford, Maryville, Tusculum, East Tennessee State, West Carolina Teachers, Randolph Macon and Hanover.

Star of the team is a 158-pound halfback, Bobby Miller, 19, of Fort Erie, Pa., who made Associated Press' All-Virginia backfield, rounded out by such name players as Gil Bocetti of Washington and Lee, Buddy Lex of William and Mary and Johnny Papit of Virginia.

Miller has averaged better than 8 yards running, 40 yards punting, 18 yards per punt return, and an amazing 42.1 yards per kickoff return.

The line averages 191 pounds with Guard Dave Via, a 200-pounder, carrying the most weight. Biggest man on the squad is hard-running Pat Sturgeon, 210-pound fullback from Mountain City, Tenn., just across the State line from Emory and Henry.

The Wasps played four home games in Bristol, Va.-Tenn., which is 25 miles away, and has a stadium seating 4500. They played only one game in Emory, where the stadium accommodates only 1500.

Last time Emory and Henry fielded an undefeated team was in 1928 when the Wasps bowled over such bigger schools as Richmond and William and Mary.

Football future of the school of 507 students is bright, however. Only Tackle Joe Heldrich and Halfback Jim Painter graduate this June. The rest of the team is entirely sophomore.

Three headline bouts will make up tonight's wrestling show at Joe Turner's Arena, with a match between Laverne Baxter and Joe Corbett topping the bill.

Another match finds Washington's Natie Brown meeting George Macricostas. The third match is between Marvi Mercer and Tony Cosenza.

College of Pacific's LeBaron On Little All-America Again

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Eddie LeBaron, the magnificent faker of College of Pacific's All-Conquering Tigers, once again heads the Little All-America football team—11 players from minor schools who probably could hold their own in any company.

There's no doubt about Heady Eddie, the 19-year-old T-formation quarterback from Turlock, Calif. The clever ball handler and passer from California set a record when he was named to the Associated Press' 1949 team.

It is the third time for Eddie, the first time any player has been picked that often for the Little A-A. The 5-foot 8-inch, 168-pound youngster was selected when he was a freshman and again last year as a junior.

LeBaron set the pace for a C. of P. team which is unbeaten and untied in 10 games. He is rated one of the best pro prospects among all of the graduating collegians.

Eddie is the only Far Westerner on the team. The Midwest has four representatives, the South three, the Southwest two, and the East one.

Joining LeBaron in the backfield are Brad Rowland of McMurry, Tex.; Bill Young of Hillsdale, Mich., and Conrad Callahan of Morningside College (Iowa). Young won honors as the Nation's leading scorer with 121 points while Rowland, a leader in that department for most of the year, chalked up 108 points.

W. & M.'s 23 Tops Nation In TD Passes

Thanks to the passing combination of Buddy Lex to Vito Ragazo, William and Mary leads the Nation in touchdown passes.

Ragazzo has caught 15 scoring passes, 14 of them from Lex. W. and M.'s total for the year is 23. The Indians rank fourth in the country in average yards passing per game, 173.

Leading in average yards passing is Fordham, which in the last two weeks jumped up to the top from seventeenth place. The Rams have averaged 183.4 yards per game. Other area teams listed are Navy (seventeenth), Virginia Military Institute (forty-fourth) and Maryland (fifty-third).

Kirk Protest Of Winner Thrown Out

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 29.—High Ground Stable's Harbourton and A. J. Wilson's Arthur Pilate battled head and head for a mile and a sixteenth today arriving at the finish line for a photo that showed Harbourton the winner.

As has been the custom in recent days, the result was not official until the stewards had weighed a foul claim. Jockey Kirk made the objection against Jack Robertson, maintaining the winner bumped his mount through the stretch.

There was no argument regarding third money for Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Red Ned closed five lengths behind the fight for top honors and eight lengths in advance of Charles Pazienza's coming on who was fourth in the field of six.

Harbourton, beaten six times since he won at Atlantic City on September 9, was the favorite and returned a $4.40 mutuel. The 3-year-old son of Eight Thirty was clocked in 1.50 over a track left muddy by last night's rain.

Platoon Offense Balloons

Not a Single Major College Game Ended in Scoreless Tie

By Steve Snider

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—At one point during the football season, Frank Leahy was moved to remark: "Notre Dame doesn't really spend much time on defense."

In this, Leahy obviously is not alone. Of the hundreds of major games played this fall not a single one ended in a dreary, dissatisfying scoreless tie. There were only three 7-to-0 or 6-to-0 games. Three others were 6 to 3 or 7 to 3. And only nine other games had scores as low as 7 to 7, 7 to 6, or 6 to 6.

Nobody mourns the death of the scoreless tie, but plenty of collegiate coaches are bitter over the present rules which stress touchdowns over defense and there'll be fireworks this winter when the rules-makers sit down to decide what's best for the future of football.

Even Bierman Is Confused

Chief target will be the substitution rules permitting the two-platoon system, bane of the "have not" coaches. They cite that rule as the big reason why offense is running away from the defense.

That may or may not be true, but at least the sub rule causes considerable confusion on the coaching bench and Bernie Bierman of Minnesota provides a rough idea of what can happen while a stream of players is whizzing in and out of the ball game.

"In our Michigan game, Michigan hit us for a long gain on a pass and when we looked around to find out what had happened we discovered we had only 10 men on the field," he said.

"An end got lost somewhere. So we sent him in where he belonged. The officials promptly paced off five yards for delaying the game with an illegal substitution, but I can't figure out to this day just who he was substituting for. Himself?"

Kerr Blames Sub Rule

Bierman wasn't citing that as an excuse for Minnesota's 10-to-7 defeat by Michigan, merely as an example of confusion.

"The pass play might or might not have affected the outcome," he said. "I won't say it did."

Andy Kerr, long-time coach at Colgate, now "put out to pasture" at little Lebanon Valley, blames the sub rule for high scoring in 1949. His theory, similar to the generally accepted theme, runs like this:

1. It permits specialists. Hence the passers are better than ever, the runners more expert at picking holes and following interference.

2. Most defensive players are lads who would be second stringers on "one platoon teams." Hence the defense makes more mistakes and defensive mistakes always are the most costly.

High Scorers On Rampage

Whatever the reason, touchdown-makers were on a rampage all year.

Georgia beat Louisiana State 7 to 0; Tennessee downed Kentucky, 6 to 0; and Nebraska defeated Iowa State, 7 to 0, in the only one touchdown shutouts of the entire year. Michigan pulled out a 7 to 3 decision over Michigan State, Oregon State did the same to Washington and South Carolina turned back Marquete, 6 to 3.

Except for those nine other games in which both teams scored only one touchdown each, scores ranged upward from 12 to 7 to the high point of the year—Connecticut 125, Newport Naval 0.

It will be interesting to see what the rules-makers decide, if anything. As Lou Little of Columbia reported:

"You can't pass legislation that will make the great teams weaker or the weak teams stronger. It simply can't be done."

Armstrong Plays Dunbar Today

The Division 10-13 high school football championship series will end today when Armstrong Tech meets the Dunbar Crimson Tide at Brooks Stadium, 3 p. m.

If Dunbar defeats Armstrong today it will move into a three-way tie for first place. But if Tech wins it will leave Cardozo and Phelps in a deadlock for the crown

Cop Bags 178-Pound Buck Deer

By Ralph Murdock

PVT. Benjamin F. Bean, of No. 1 Precinct, has just returned from a successful deer hunting trip in the Shenandoah National Forest where he killed a 178-pound buck. A single shot from Bean's 30-30 Winchester carbine did the trick. The antlers were of the 10-pound variety. Private Bean intends to have the head of the deer mounted and freeze the meat for future festivities.

The fishermen's division of the Engineer's Club held its monthly tournament at Solomon's Island. Chairman George A. Cunney reports that Andrew W. Dinsmore, a guest of the club, was high hook for the day.

For a full week the rough waters of the Chesapeake Bay played havoc with the striped bass anglers. On Sunday afternoon good catches were made by the boats which fished on the eastern side of the channel. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hubbard and Dr. George Adams caught 76 while fishing from the Taffy. A 5½-pounder taken by the "Missus" was high gun. The balance weighed up to 2 pounds.

AFTER GOING fishless in the morning, Ed Cox and the writer nabbed 67 in the afternoon with Capt. Bert Lamb. Fishing with 12-ounce sinkers and steel lines and nylon lines with no weights produced the same results. Just couldn't catch a big one.

Two boat loads of trollers from Ott's Garage, consisting of David Moore, Cecil Jones, David Howard, Clyde Wallace, Melvin Taylor, James McLaughlin, Pete Miller and Joe Dodger fished with the western shore of the bay near Breezy Point. They ended up with 29 pan size rock. The fishing party was sponsored by A. G. Dezzendorf, owner of Ott's Garage.

Capt. Edgar Bowen of Solomons Island, who will travel 40 miles to latch on to a tackle-busting striper, trolled at Harrisons Hole below the Gooses. With a party of four anglers from the District he boated four 15-pound hefties while fishing on the bottom with No. 19 Tony Acetta spoons. The four fish totaled 59 pounds.

Edward A. Vaughn, director of Maryland's Game and Inland Fish Commission advises that the State's waterfowl public shooting areas at Taylors Island, Dorchester County, and Cedar Island, Somerset County, will be opened for public use during the migratory bird season. Copies of regulations may be obtained from the clerks of the court, hunting license agencies and game wardens in the above counties. There are 97 blind sites in the two locations.

Catholic U. Five Opens Schedule

Coach Abe Rosenfield's Catholic University basketeers open an 18-game schedule against the alumni at 8:30 tonight at the C.U. gym in Brookland.

Bernie Lieb, captain of the '35 team, and Jack Walsh and Gene Sklarz, members of last year's team, will be the big guns for the alumni. Jim Losty, Harry Ballint and Herb and Bill Sondericker will carry the load for the Cardinals along with Joe Della Ratta.

Jan Jankowski, C.U. football mentor, will coach the alumni. The Cards meet Georgetown Monday night at C. U. in their first regular game.

Kopel Denies He Witnessed Gaming in His Restaurant

ceiving instructions from Judge Richmond B. Keech. The defense rested its case late yesterday after producing 15 witnesses in less than four hours.

At the start of yesterday's session, Judge Keech drastically revised the five-count indictment against the two men.

He ordered the charge against Kopel of setting up a gaming table dropped. He ordered the charge of setting up a gaming place dropped against both men. And he ordered the charge against Kopel of accepting a bet dropped.

Wilfred Barrett, part-time law student and undercover investigator for United States Attorney George Morris Fay, and pretty Mrs. Edith Wildrick, secretary in Fay's office, have testified that on three occasions they placed horse race bets with Plummer at Hammel's. On numerous other occasions, they testified, they overheard waiters taking bets.

Kopel testified he did not know what an Armstrong scratch sheet was, or for what it was used. Two of them were found in Hammel's when marshals raided the restaurant on March 25, in one of eight simultaneous raids made that day under Fay's direction. Kopel was leaning on one of the scratch sheets when he was arrested, according to the Government.

Kopel testified that on two of the occasions when bets were made he was not in the restaurant. On March 17 he was supervising a private party on the restaurant's second floor, he said, and on March 23 he was attending a labor mediation meeting.

Under cross-examination by Prosecutor Arthur J. McLaughlin, Kopel at first denied that a bar radio was ever used to receive horse-race results. Under prompting from Judge Keech he later admitted that it was so used.

Kopel denied a slip noting a 35-cent combination numbers play and another slip noting a "whipsaw" horse bet were found on his person. A deputy marshal testified he searched Kopel and found the slips.

Kopel admitted that a small card with three telephone numbers printed on it was in his wallet, but said he thought the numbers were from a salesman. McLaughlin asked him if the numbers were not listed to a building on Bladensburg road where a racing ticker was located. Kopel replied "emphatically no."

Another slip containing four three-digit numbers Kopel identified as the overseas serial numbers of two Army sons.

Commissioner James J. O'Byrne of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service testified Kopel kept a 3 p. m. appointment with him on March 23. Mrs. Hildrick said she made a bet in Hammel's just before 3 p. m. on that day, and that Kopel was there. Anthony L. Montaquilo, a labor lawyer, corroborated O'Byrne's testimony.

Ogden Douglas, a retired merchant and frequenter of Hammel's, testified he played the horses and could "get a bet down at Barber's Newsstand," but, he said, he was not a bookmaker and never accepted bets from anybody in Hammel's. The newsstand is across 10th st., from Hammel's and was one of the eight places raided by Fay March 25. Three men face trial as a result of the raid.

Eight persons appeared as character witnesses for Kopel. McLaughlin asked one of them, Robert E. Lee, vice president of the Lincoln National Bank, if he knew Kopel had been arrested for violation of the liquor laws in 1932. Lee, who had testified that "Kopel has an excellent reputation as a law-abiding citizen," answered in the negative.

Shah Hits Fort Knox Jackpot, Fails to Collect

Fort Knox, Ky., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Shah of Iran hit the jackpot here today. But it failed to pay off.

On a visit to the officers' club, the Shah was attracted to a slot machine and dropped in a coin. Officers were embarrassed when the machine failed to pay off, but the Shah took the incident good naturedly.

Alexandria Man Killed

May Dodson, 72, of 1313 King st., Alexandria, said no money was taken in the incident three years ago "because I don't think he had any money with him then." She said he was found unconscious inside the plant and spent several weeks in the hospital.

Dodson's brother, Amuel Dodson, 1116 Cameron st., Alexandria, said Dodson has been in the habit of carying large sums of money with him. But he added that Dodson, who had worked for Mutual Ice Co. about 14 years, was "easy-going" and had no enemies.

Dodson moved from the E. Bellefonte ave. address when his wife, Bessie, died earlier this year. Since then, police said, he lived in Washington, moving two days ago to a tourist camp off U. S. Route 1 in Arlington County.

Detectvies said there were no fingerprints on the crowbar or axle because of Monday night's rain.

19 Hurt in Mine Fire, Reds Say

Berlin, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Soviet-licensed news agency ADN said tonight one German miner died in a fire at the Johanngeorgenstadt mine in the Erz Mountains.

Yesterday the British-licensed newspaper Telegraf reported that the mine, producing uranium ore, was swept by a fire which killed 2000 miners.

The ADN account agreed with the Telegraf only in location of the mine and that the fire's origin was a short circuit in the cables. ADN did not mention uranium.

Erz Mountain mines have been producing a low-grade uranium ore since 1947. Western sources say most of the miners are political prisoners.

The mine is about 150 miles south of Berlin.

7 Arrested, Linked With Machine Gun Holdups

D. C. Streetcar Pass Leads to Capture Of Gang Held in $107,000 Bail

Police yesterday announced arrest of seven alleged members of a machinegun-equipped gaang held responsible for five holdups here since October 30.

The seven men waived their hearing on arraignment yesterday in Municipal Court on charges of robbery before Judge Thomas D. Quinn. The men were held in bond totaling $107,000 for action of the grand jury.

They are: Virgil A. Crymes, 21, 2308 Pomeroy rd. se.; Robert Paul Young, 23, 741 Howard rd. se.; Clarence A. Jackson, 39, 1917-A Benning rd. ne.; Frederick A. McDowell, 22, 706 Howard rd. se.; Alvin E. Prue, 18, 2415 Pomeroy rd. se.; Owen P. Wright, 24, 2915 Stanton rd. se., and Paul E. Gothard, jr., 18, 2425 18th pl. se.

Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, said Crymes was the only one of the seven involved in all five holdups. Bryant said all of the men have been identified by holdup victims and have admitted their parts in the robberies.

Police declared an eighth member of the gang is still at large. Under a bed in Young's room, police said, was found a hand-type submachine gun containing 19 bullets.

From the pockets of the seven suspects, police said, they culled a .32 caliber revolver, a knife and three blackjacks.

Police said the gang used two stolen cars in their robberies.

The handle of the .32 caliber revolver was taped, leading police to believe it was broken when a bandit slugged a clerk in the holdup of a Western Union office in Southeast Washington October 30 after robbing her of $268.

The bandits struck early Monday morning, police said, in a brutal holdup of a Capital Transit bus driver in the 4500 block of 3d st. se.

The driver, Charles E. Boswell, 22, of 1812 U pl. se., was robbed of $26 in bills, $10 in change, 400 car tokens and 40 weekly passes.

The robbery squad received a report Monday that a man was peddling tokens and weekly passes at bargain rates on a downtown street corner. He was selling the regularly priced $1.75 weekly passes for $1. Under the direction of Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, Sergts James M. Roche and William L. Sparshott and Lieut. Otto P. Fuss of the robbery squad raced to the scene and arrested Gothard.

Within a few hours Crymes, Young and McDowell had been caught. Detectives brought in Jackson, Wright and Prue at about 5 a. m. yesterday.

Pursuing Cabbie's Radio Directions Guide Police to Stolen Taxi in 70-MPH Chase

The Washington Post

Louise Diggs and Mrs. Richard Jones, radio dispatchers, recount the taxicab chase with Carl W. Nestor, cabbie who followed the stolen taxi

A Washington cabbie who reads true detective magazines tailed a cab robber for 15 miles along Baltimore blvd. at speeds up to 70 miles an hour until police nabbed the fugitive yesterday afternoon.

Hero of the chase was Carl W. Nestor, 46, a cabbie here for 26 years, who kept up a steady stream of chatter over his two-way radio to keep his dispatcher, and police, informed of the progress of the fleeing cab.

The fast-moving episode started this way, according to police:

Marcelino H. Rodill, 54, cabbie of 909 Evarts st. ne., picked up a fare in downtown Washington and was instructed to drive to 1403 N. Capitol st. There the fare told Rodill to ring the doorbell and ask the person answering to come out to the cab.

Rodill, failing to get a response at the front door, tried a side door. Again no response. Turning back, he found his cab, Bell No. 238, had vanished. He called police and the dispatcher at Combined Cabs.

Police broadcast a lookout. So did the Combined dispatcher, Mrs. Lucey Jones, 44, of 520 E st. ne., who announced over the cabbie circuit:

"Attention all Combined Cabs. Bell 238 was stolen from N. Capitol and N sts. nw. KGA-291 (call sign of the transmitter)."

And it happened that just then, about 1:10 p. m., Cabbie Nestor, the man who reads detective stories, emerged from his house at 5604 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md., and climbed into his cab. Switching on his radio he heard the lookout.

"Hmm," said the amateur sleuth to himself. "Chances are the thief would head for Baltimore. Think I'll play that hunch."

So Nestor nosed his cab for Riverdale rd. and Baltimore pike. And sure enough, in about five minutes, Bell 238 whizzed by.

"So I phoned my dispatcher," Nestor later recalled. "And I asked: 'Miss Jones, is Bell 238 the one that was stolen?' and she said yes, it was.

"I told her, 'I'm going to turn around and follow.'"

The dispatcher replied: "Be sure to let us know where you are."

Nestor responded: "There're two in the cab . . . doing 45 or 50 . . . I'm about 300 yards behind"

" . . . I'm passing the Maryland University campus. They're stopping near a liquor store.

"They picked up a hitchhiker.

"Coming into Berwyn . . . passing Berwyn . . . Near Beltsville.

"Did you get police? They're stepping it up. Doing 65 or 70 . . ."

At which point the dispatcher informed Nestor a combined telephone operator, Miss Louise Diggs, had the local police dispatcher on a phone line, keeping him posted.

"But don't you try to catch them," cautioned Mrs. Jones, mindful there were three in the fleeing cab.

"I'm coming to the Laurel Sanitarium," Nestor shouted. And just then, he said:

"I spotted a police car come alongside of me. I held up my left hand and pointed out the Bell cab and they nodded their heads, to say yes."

Maryland State Troopers forced the car to the side of the road. Troopers R. Y. Wolfe and R. J. Powlery snagged their quarry.

Two passengers were released after convincing police they had hitchhiked, unaware the cab was stolen. The driver, who identified himself as Cletis C. Hutton, 39, of Marion, Va., was charged with being a fugitive from the District wanted for cab larceny and held in the Wateloo lockup for Washington.

Nestor said he kept 200 to 300 yards behind the fugitive cab throughout the chase—"trying always to keep another car between me and them so they wouldn't know I was following."

Trade Board To Fete 130 Area Firms

Dinner Tonight Part Of Week-Long Observance of 60th Anniversary

More than 130 member firms of the Washington Board of Trade are to be honored at a dinner today at 7:30 p. m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The dinner is part of the week-long observance of the trade board's sixtieth anniversary, which began last Sunday and extends through Friday.

Firms which are to be honored will be those which have been active on the local business scene for 60 years or more. Representatives will receive certificates from Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Washington Board of Trade.

Herman Steinkraus, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will be the principal spekaer at the dinner, at which Robert V. Fleming will preside as toastmaster. D. C. Commissioner J. Russell Young also will address dinner guests.

On Friday, the celebration will be brought to a close with a luncheon of the traffic committee at 12:30 p. m. at the Burlington Hotel, when events concerning the anniversary will be discussed and awards to long-time members of the traffic committee made.

The United States Chamber of Commerce joined the birthday celebration last night by devoting its ABC network program, "This Is Our Town," to a dramatization of the board's activities over the years.

Because of a typographical error, the names of two policemen, who received oral commendation for outstanding detective work at the board meeting at Lisner Auditorium Monday night, were left out of The Washington Post yesterday. They are Detective Sergeants James Roche and Robert G. Kirby of the Detective Bureau. The Post regrets the error.

Woman Hurt in Auto Crash Is Awarded $10,000 Damages

The Washington Post

Mrs. Charles S. Stephenson and children, Stephen and Suzanne

A rear admiral's wife was awarded $10,000 damages yesterday after testifying that a traffic accident injury so undermined her confidence that she could not resume her stage career.

She is Mrs. Charles S. Stephenson, 51, of 4457 Q st. nw. Her two children, Stephen, 13, and Suzanne, 11, were each awarded $1000 by the District Court jury.

The accident occurred at 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw. The Stephensons were in an automobile driven by Admiral Stephenson (ret.). They were struck by another car driven by defendant Percy C. Shepherd, 1422 Longfellow st. nw. The collision was in 1941. The case was delayed because of the war.

Mrs. Stephenson suffered a fractured jawbone, three fractured upper front teeth and nerve injuries. Her children were both cut and bruised.

She said that at the time of the accident, she was planning to resume her dramatic career. During the post-World War I period she played in light opera roles under the tutelage of the Shuberts and Victor Herbert. Her parts included major characters in "Blossom Time" and "Eileen."

At the present time, her confidence is so shattered, she said, that she will not even consent to sing solo for the St. Patrick's Episcopal Church, where she is in a choir.

She was represented by Attorney Guy Bayes. Shepherd did not contest the suit.

Two in Jail Hacksaw Smuggling Arrested

Blades Put in Milk Container By Youths Visiting 'Tough Guy' Wagstaff at Rockville

Two youths were arrested by Montgomery County police yesterday after an attempt to smuggle hacksaw blades to the cell of Joseph A. Wagstaff, 24-year-old "tough guy."

The youths were identified as Alfred S. DeAgro, jr., 18, of 8105 University la., Silver Spring, Md., and Leonard W. Lewis, 21, a mechanic of 4623 Asbury pl. nw.

Police said both have juvenile records, that Lewis is married, and that DeAgro is the son of a retired Army colonel.

Wagstaff, whose home is at 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, Md., and who has been in hot water with police on and off during the past few years, was convicted for the second time Monday of assaulting his family's maid with a paring knife. He was to have been sentenced yesterday.

De Agro Lewis

Police said DeAgro and Lewis stopped at the sheriff's office shortly before 3 p. m. and obtained a permit to visit Wagstaff, who was locked up in a cell on the top and fourth floor of the courthouse in Rockville.

After a short visit with Wagstaff the two youths left, police said, but a brief time later DeAgro returned with a quart carton of milk for the prisoner. However, Wagstaff had just been taken to the courtroom on the floor below for sentencing.

The carton of milk was left with the jailer, Joseph Moxley. The jailer, suspecting the weight of the carton, opened it and found a half-pint bottle of whisky and three hacksaw blades, each of which had been snapped in the middle.

Moxley immediately notified the sheriff's office of his find. County detectives located DeAgro and Lewis in the courtroom on the floor below where Wagstaff was to be sentenced. They were arrested.

DeAgro and Lewis were charged with conspiracy to aid in escape from jail and were held in $2000 bond each. A hearing was scheduled for them in Rockville police court December 22.

Police said the charge against the youths carries a maximum penalty of a $2000 fine or 10 years in prison, or both.

Police said they believe the plot was prearranged and that Wagstaff was expecting the hacksaw blades.

Wagstaff's scheduled sentence yesterday was postponed because of the absence of his attorney, and December 6 was set as the new date for sentencing.

Boston Boost Cited as CTC Wage Arbitration Winds Up

The President's Steel Factfinding Board report and a two-step 14½-cent wage increase granted Boston transit workers Monday night were the center of discussion in a windup yesterday of the Capital Transit Co. arbitration.

The company's spokesman, Hawley Simpson, leaned heavily on the findings of the steel board in arguing that no wages increase is justified, while Eli Oliver, counsel for the company's union employes, said Boston had joined other large cities which had granted substantial wage boosts.

Oliver spoke first at the Hamilton Hotel. After Simpson completed his summation, the board adjourned to meet again the week of December 12 for executive sessions to hammer out the arbitration award.

Seventy-five bus and streetcar operators, many accompanied by children, listened to the closing arguments.

Oliver said the 1947 CTC arbitration award was based on the wage rates paid in nine cities with populations over a million. At that time the average rate for bus and streetcar operators was $1.32. At present it is $1.53 in eight cities with Pittsburgh wages still under discussion, a boost of 21 cents. The union has asked for a 25-cent-an-hour raise.

The Boston rate hike was set late Monday by an arbitration award at 10 cents, effective last July 1, with another 4½ cents tacked on next January 10, David Zimring, arbitration board member, explained.

Oliver added the buying power of the dollar here is "much less than" in the other eight cities included in the average. He said the $1.47 an hour rate in Los Angeles would require $1.56 to buy the same amount here. Similarly, San Francisco buys 5 cents more; Cleveland 10 cents more; Chicago 4 cents; Detroit 5 cents and Pittsburgh 5 cents.

Apparently anticipating the transit company would cite the steel report, which recommended denial of a wage increase, Oliver noted that David Cole, member of the steel board, later sat on a transit arbitration board and supported a wage increase.

He also cited Cole's view that the proper way for a transit arbitration board to operate is first to determine "fair wages," then let the company go before the public regulatory bodies "if there is a need for a change in the net income of the company."

Oliver renewed his request for improvements in insurance benefits, sick leave, paid holidays, night differentials and other working conditions.

Simpson joined with J. E. Heberle, CTC vice president and comptroller, in an attack on municipally operated transit units such as Boston's.

Heberle declared such firms "go into the city coffers and are subject to politics." He said CTC had no such financial resources and renewed his warning that substantial service cuts or a fare increase may be required even without any change in transit wages.

Simpson, company labor counsel, said CTC has not been a laggard in working conditions and wages and has increased wages, in effect, as much as the steel industry, a leader in wage rates, has from 1939 to 1945.

Posing the same criteria as the steel board did in making its recommendations, Simpson declared transit workers are not "in an inequitable position as compared with other industrial workers," are not suffering an "inequity" as compared with the firm's stockholders and passengers and are not at a disadvantage "compared with all other income-receiving groups in the general economy outside" the transit industry.

Heberle disclosed that of the additional revenue resulting from the fare increase granted in the fall of 1948, only $150,000 went to the firm's stockholders while most of the amount went to offset wages set by the 1947 arbitration award and higher costs of materials.

The company official estimated the cost of the union's demands at $4,582,000, if granted in toto. He then reminded the five-man board that had earlier testified that passenger traffic has been declining at the rate of 6.2 percent since January, 1947, and in May of this year rose to 7 percent with no indication of any letup in the trend.

Arnold Line Tells Hope of New Revenues

The Arnold Bus Lines expects to take in from $229,400 to $340,474 in additional revenue next year, if its request for a 5-cent-per-zone fare increase is granted.

The figures were cited by T. Roy Grubbs, witness for the bus company and a partner in the Richmond accounting firm of A. M. Pullen Co. at a hearing yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Grubbs said the $229,400 figure takes into account a 15-percent drop in passenger traffic (due to the higher fares). The $340,474 figure is based on a traffic decrease of 10 percent.

Grubbs' testimony showed the bus company continued to operate at a loss, following an earlier 5-cent fare increase granted two years ago.

Bernard Wahle, general manager of the company, said, however, that the new fare increase would make it possible to eliminate a $600-a-day loss claimed at present by the company, and would permit expansion of personnel, and an increase in officers' salaries.

Under cross-examination, Wahle revealed that Joseph Arnold was requested to step down as company president in April of this year, by officials of the Buffalo Marine Trust Co.

Questioned by Lester R. Conley, attorney for the Arlington County Board, Wahle said the bank, which holds a lien on the bus company, "asked that he (Arnold) be chairman of the board and that I be president, to which Mr. Arnold did not agree."

Arnold's salary as president was $9031 for the period from March 5, 1947, to December 16, 1947, testimony by Richard C. Bennett, comptroller.

Bennett said Arnold received no salary in 1948, but went on the payroll again at $18,000 annually, "several days prior to assumption of control of the company by the State."

The hearing is scheduled to resume at 9:30 a. m. today.

Traffic Case Of Persian Is Dropped

Minutes after a Montgomery County Circuit Court jury found a 27-year-old Persian student guilty of a traffic charge yesterday, the verdict was set aside and the case dropped by the prosecution.

This unprecedented action occurred after the defendant, Cyrus H. Khibiri, an international relations student at the University of Southern California, appealed to Judge Charles W. Woodward for a possible reconsideration of the case.

Khibiri, who argued his own case, had informed the court that a conviction of any nature might imperil his plans for a diplomatic career.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson, after a few moments of indecision following Khibiri's request for reconsideration, entered a motion to set aside the verdict. He also told Judge Woodward he would nolle pros the charge.

Dawson said he would have dropped the charges before coming to court if he had known of the possible implications to the aspiring diplomat's career.

Judge Woodward accepted the motion, but not before informing the jury, which deliberated only six minutes, that it had found the proper verdict from the evidence.

Arrested September 2 for passing a red light in Bethesda, Khibiri was fined $10 in police court there on September 26, despite his contention that he was entitled, under the United States Constitution, to a jury trial. His appeal from this conviction was heard yesterday.

He maintained he had stopped for the light, but was blocking the intersection and had pulled ahead only to permit cross traffic to proceed.

Policeman's Wife Freed; Ruled Not a Mental Case

Judge Charles C. Marbury of Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday ordered the release of the wife of a Washington policeman from a Maryland mental hospital after finding her detention "a preposterous situation."

Testimony was offered that Mrs. Alpha Hodge, 34, of 5122 V st., Bradbury Heights, Md., wife of Pvt. Roy J. Hodge, of the Fifth Precinct, had been certified as a mental patient by two doctors and confined in Spring Grove State Hospital, Catonsville, Md., on November 17.

She was taken to the institution by her husband and another policeman while working in Hillsdale, Md., store, the court was told.

Dr. James Sidney May of the hospital staff said in court that Mrs. Hodge was not a mental patient and did not need mental treatment. Judge Marbury ruled there was "no foundation" for the woman's confinement in the institution and ordered her release.

Cohn said he will reemploy Mrs. Hodges if she desires.

Records indicate Mrs. Hodge charged her husband with nonsupport and assault last July. He was fined $25 and appealed to Prince Georges Circuit Court. A jury returned a guilty verdict but the fine was suspended on the jury's recommendation of leniency.

One of the two doctors who certified Mrs. Hodge, Dr. Elmer Klein, psychiatrist, of 6634 Barnaby st. nw., told a reporter he had found Mrs. Hodge was mentally ill, a schizophrenic. He also said "psychiatrists do differ." The other physician, Dr. William Brainin, general practitioner of Capitol Heights, declined to comment.

Hampshire Citizens Vote To Carry On

The Hampshire Heights Citizens Association voted last night to continue its existence after two years of lagging attendance at meetings.

Members insisted there was a need for the association in the community and that adjacent citizens groups couldn't serve those needs as well.

The group of 18 was the largest attendance at a meeting since the middle of 1947, according to President O. Ellsworth Rue. During its 10 years of existence, the organization has had as many as 700 members at one time.

In a four-part resolution, the members voted to hold elections at the January meeting, reactivate the membership and publicity committees, and inaugurate a membership drive.

Oil Building Floor Leased For Courts

The Public Buildings Administration yesterday leased the top floor of the Standard Oil Building for use as additional District courtrooms and chambers.

PBA signed a lease for 11,334 square feet of space in the structure at Constitution ave. and 3d st. nw., for $19,000 a year. The lease runs out next June, with an option to renew it until June, 1952, by which time the consolidated Federal courthouse should be completed.

The space, which will be available within 60 days, is needed to ease the room shortage in District Court caused by recent appointment of three new judges. The situation has become so acute that enforced idleness of at least one judge has been threatened.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws said he plans to install partitions and soundproofing for two courtrooms in the new building and use the rest for office and chambers space.

Carnival Man Held On Girl's Charges

A 67-year-old carnival employe yesterday was held in $500 bond for the grand jury charged with indecently molesting an 11-year-old girl.

The man, John Sharley, of Columbia, S. C., was accused of taking liberties with the child while she was playing tag with other youngsters. Bond was set by Municipal Judge George D. Neilson.

Found the Pistol, He Tells Judge; Gets 160 Days

Jesse S. Lawson's story that he had found in the street the automatic pistol he was carrying failed to impress Municipal Judge George D. Neilson yesterday.

"It's high time people realized you cannot walk about armed with knives and pistols," Neilson commented as he sentenced Lawson to 160 days straight time.

"A jail sentence is all some people understand and that is what they are going to get from here on out," asserted the jurist.

Lawson lives at 1254 New Jersey ave. nw.

CTC Requests Rehearing On Cut in Pentagon Fare

Capital Transit Co. declared yesterday it would suffer "confiscatory" action if lower fares to the Pentagon and other Virginia points are put into effect while the Interstate Commerce Commission is considering a request for higher fares.

This was advanced as one reason for requesting a rehearing by the Supreme Court of the bus fare case, decided against the transit line two weeks ago in a 5-to-3 decision.

If the rehearing is denied, the 17,000 or so passengers who daily ride from Washington to jobs in nearby Virginia will get a fare reduction of 70 cents on each five-days' worth of tickets.

The transit line's petition for rehearing, filed yesterday, was the first official intimation it will ask for higher fares on trans-Potomac tickets. The old joint fares, to be restored under the Supreme Court ruling, were set when the fare in the District was 10 cents. It now is 13 cents. A 3-cent boost per ride, at least, thus is a likely prospect but it usually takes some time for the ICC to conduct a hearing and issue rulings.

The transit line pointed out that the majority opinion of the Court declared the confiscatory issue was not properly presented to the ICC for its determination. Hence the high court said the question was "not ripe for judicial review."

Capital Transit declared that "uncontradicted evidence" showed it had cost 9.968 cents per passenger to furnish service for which, under the lower fare rate, it received 5.83 cents and, when fares went up, 7 cents.

The brief declared the court "erroneously decided a far-reaching question of vital importance involving the judicial review of administrative rate regulatory orders." It said the Court, in the past, has "uniformly and zealously guarded the constitutional rights of a utility against confiscatory rate orders becoming or remaining effective pending further State administrative or judicial action."

The utility also asked for reconsideration of the case on the issue of jurisdiction. The high court held that Capital Transit passengers are "an integral part of an interstate movement" even though they cross into Virginia on other lines after transferring within the District.

Held up during the determination of the rehearing request is the repayment of about $2500 to passengers who have saved 6-cent and 3-cent receipts issued during the long court battle over the joint fare issue.

5 Million In D. C. by '99 Forecast

Metropolitan Washington will nearly quadruple its present population to five millions during the next 50 years, a member of the Fine Arts Commission predicted yesterday.

Frederick Vernon Murphy, who has been an architect here the past half century, said the Capital City in 1999 will be even more beautifully landscaped, will be "practically" free of slums and will boast both an opera house and a gallery of modern art.

To meet the atomic attack threat, he said "a network of passageways directly under key Government bureaus here is a likely possibility.

Washington will "become a choice place to live with everything to recommend it except the temperature," Murphy told the faculty and students of Dunbarton College.

The latest Census Bureau figures last August placed the Metropolitan Washington population at 1,402,000.

Most of the population growth, he said, would take in the periphery of the District proper. "There will be more Silver Spring, Bethesda and Arlington-type developments," Murphy said.

The Fine Arts Commission member predicted eventual replacement of single story houses north of Union Station and in the Griffith Stadium area by hotels and multiple housing.

Murphy saw room for further development in Anacostia after more bridges are built in Rosslyn and nearby Arlington County.

Murphy said he arrived at his five-million population prediction this way: "When I came to Washington 50 years ago the area-wide population was 320,000. Today it is four times greater. I think the same trend will continue during the next 50 years," he said.

Murphy is senior partner in Murphy and Locraft, architectural firm, and was head of the Department of Architecture at Catholic University until his retirement last July. His four principal works here are the Sacred Heart Church, the Mullen Memorial Library, the Papal Legation and Dunbarton College.

The $5,500,000 White House renovation is expected to begin next week when workmen start building a new underpinning for the sagging 157-year-old mansion.

The Commission on the Renovation of the Executive Mansion yesterday approved a subcontract for the underpinning. It was let by John McShain, Inc., general contractor, to Spencer, White & Prentis, Inc., of New York, for cost plus a fixed fee of $48,250.

As soon as the contract is signed, workmen will begin building three frame sheds on the White House south grounds. Others will start a trench inside the walls to a depth of 20 feet for the new concrete foundation. No more than 4 feet of the outer walls will be without underpinning at any one time and even that will be shored up while concrete is being poured to prevent any possible sag or collapse, according to Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, the commissions' executive secretary.

The general said legal details should be attended to by the first of the week with work beginning immediately afterward. At about the same time, other workmen will begin removing paneling and other interior decorations which will be stored and eventually replaced in the mansion.

The whole job is expected to be finished around Thanksgiving Day, 1951. The McShain firm has 22 months to do the job for cost plus a $100,000 fee. Only the general and underpinning contracts are cost plus. All others will be awarded on a fixed-price basis.

Gas Firm Denies It Acted Wrongly In Appliance Sales

The Washington Gas Light Co. denied yesterday charges made in a suit that it acted improperly in selling and installing gas appliances here.

The suit was filed by John G. Webster & Sons, Inc., appliance firm here. It asked for a "quo warranto" writ designed to find out by what right, if any, the gas company does the acts charged. These include "unlicensed" plumbing and engaging in an appliance sale campaign.

The gas company answer, filed through Attorney F. G. Awalt, says the "quo warranto" writ cannot be brought against a corporation or for the acts charged. Also, the answer states, the gas company is acting properly and within its corporate charter.

Gen. Miller Is Named Canon

Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller will become a canon of Washington Cathedral Thursday," it was announced yesterday.

Gen. Miller

Chaplain Miller, who completed a four-year term as Army Chief of Chaplains July 13, has applied for retirement and expects to be released soon.

The chaplain, who has never held a civilian pulpit, and who began his Army career in 1918, will assist the department of promotion at the cathedral, in addition to preaching and conducting services.

In welcoming General Miller as the newest canon, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, said the presence of the 59-year-old chaplain will serve to reemphasize the cathedral's "universality as a house of prayer for all people."

Chaplain Miller is a native of Leechburg, Pa., a graduate of Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., and of Chicago Theological Seminary. He holds honorary degrees from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.; Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa.; Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, and Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Ind.

Negro Group Initiates Two White Women

Alpha Kappa Alpha, oldest Negro sorority in existence, last night initiated two white women into the organization.

The white initiates, first in the sorority's 41-year-old history, are Mrs. Marjorie T. Ware, 913 North Carolina ave. se., a researcher for the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., who holds a master of science degree from Wellesley College, and Miss Olive Young, 1712 16th st. nw., an employe of United States Employment Service and a graduate of the University of Rochester and George Washington University School of Law.

Following ceremonies at the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA annex at 1719 13th st. nw., Miss Young declared she accepted membership because she does not believe in racial segregation and hopes to further the aims of the sorority which includes civic improvements for Negroes on the lower economic scale.

Mrs. Ware said she feels her background as a labor legislative representative will be put to use in aiding the American Council on Human Rights which is supported by the sorority.

The sorority, founded at Howard University in 1908, includes singer Marian Anderson and civic leader Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee among its members.

Negro members initiated at last night's meeting are Mrs. Inez C. Walker, 3761 Jay st. ne., Mrs. Eugenia Reagin, 3613 10th st. nw., and Mrs. Mary G. Turner, 859 19th st. ne.

From Patient

Ex-Hospital Aide Held In Theft

A former employe of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital was held in $1500 bond yesterday for the grand jury on a charge of stealing $68 from a patient awaiting an operation.

The suspect, George E. Baskerville, 1729 11th st. nw., was charged with taking a pocketbook containing $68 from Nick Fanelli, Landover, Md., whom he helped undress before putting him to bed November 25. Fanelli, a stonecutter, gave an emotional account of the incident before Municipal Judge George D. Neilson.

"I was on a stretcher," Fanelli exclaimed. "He took off my clothes but I kept my pocketbook in my hand. He said 'Give it to me.' I say 'No, I want to keep it.' But he took it away. If I kept it in my hand everything would be all right. I can't read or write but I got sense."

Fanelli testified that, following the operation he went to the hospital office to recover his clothing. The pocketbook, he said, was in his coat pocket—but the cash was missing.

Baskerville, on the witness stand, denied the charge but admitted a long record of assaults and larceny.

Truscott reported that Peterson, suspended at 12:30 a. m. Sunday by Lieut. John J. Boyd, was found "intoxicated to the point of being unfit for duty."

Lieut. Samuel J. Prophet suspended Williams at 6 p. m., Sunday, for being in an "intoxicated condition" at Sheridan and Pomeroy rds. se., in uniform but off duty.

Prophet said he observed Williams at 4:45 p. m., Sunday, 45 minutes after Williams' tour of duty was over. The suspended officer had insisted to his superiors that he was supposed to begin working at 4 p. m., Prophet reported.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

I stopped at the drug store for a few minutes this morning and while I was there an anxious-looking young man came running in, and asked for the telephone. When he saw that someone was using it, he explained that there'd been an accident up the street and that he wanted to call an ambulance. The man who was on the telephone quickly gave up the line and the young man put through his call.

This situation made me realize how vital the telephone is in times of emergency, and how important it is for us to think of others when we use the telephone.

That's especially true on party lines. A good party-line neighbor gives up the line when it's needed in an emergency, just as he'd expect others to do for him. At times like this, a little thoughtfulness goes a long way.

—DEATHS—

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

THE founding of the Federal Peoples Republic of Yugoslavia was celebrated with a reception yesterday afternoon at the Yugoslav Embassy. Hostess was Mme. Trbojevic, snapped by the cameraman with Dr. Edward U. Condon, Director of the National Bureau of Standards (center), and the host, Ambassador Sava Kosanovic.

At Yugoslav Embassy Reception

Not a Soviet, Satellite in Sight

By Marie McNair

NOT a Soviet nor a "satellite" was in sight yesterday at the Yugoslav Embassy at the reception celebrating the anniversary of the Federal Peoples Republic. The reason why? They weren't invited.

Marshal Tito's Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic, and his sister, Mme. Mica Trbojevic, skipped over the Soviet Embassy and the satellite countries when they invited 1400 guests to celebrate yesterday's anniversary with them.

European diplomats were there and there was generous representation from the State Department and resident circles. There was also a general atmosphere of friendliness at the fete yesterday, with hearty congratulations packed with real feeling going the rounds.

The Ambassador and Mme. Trbojevic stood together in the small salon to welcome the callers streaming up the stairway. With them was Dr. Ales Bebler, Yugoslavia's Deputy Foreign Minister.

Mme. Trbojevic, in a gray crepe gown with long sleeves and a graceful long skirt, had pinned a spray of gardenias to her shoulder.

Among the Diplomats

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne came in alone, so did the Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffmann. George V. Allen, until recently Assistant Secretary of State and now our Ambassador to Yugoslavia, was there, with Mrs. Allen, and Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State. Mrs. Allen wore wine red and Mrs. Webb was in black with a saucy feather on her hat. I saw the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet winding his way through the crowded drawing room. The Italian Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani, was there without his Signora, in a group which included the Luxembourg Minister, Hugues Le Gallais, who also had arrived alone.

The Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin had Mme. Erkin with him, and the Dominican Ambassador, Luis Thomen, was accompanied by Senora de Thomen. The Finish Minister and Mme. Jutila were there, too. The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys paid a hurried call, as did the Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde. Lingering longer were the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon.

Dr. Condon There

Dr. E. U. Condon, head of the Bureau of Standards, didn't budge from his corner in the big room, but still had plenty of company.

FIELD Marshal Sir William Slim, Chief of the British Imperial Staff, and Field Marshal the Earl Wavell, were the guests in whose honor the U. S. Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. Lawton Collins entertained at dinner last night at their quarters at Fort McNair. General and Mrs. Collins were hosts at dinner Monday evening for a group of 30 of their Army friends.

MRS. GORDON KENNY will be hostess at luncheon today in the Mayflower Lounge honoring the Duchess d'Uzes of Paris, who is currently the guest here of Miss Irene Wright, whom she knew in Paris during the war.

The Duchess was Miss Josephine Angela, originally from New York, and this is her first visit in 17 years. She flew over especially to enjoy a characteristic Thanksgiving holiday with her coworker of war years in Europe.

The Duchess d'Uzes was honor guest at a dinner last evening given by Gen. Lloyd Parks, Chief of Information USA, and Mrs. Parks, who entertained in their quarters at Fort Myer. The group also included Gen. and Mrs. Clark L. Ruffner, Col. and Mrs. George Eyster, Miss Iren Wright, Col. and Mrs. George van Pope and Col. and Mrs. Thomas Davies.

THE retirement of two of Washington's leading military men was the occasion for two large receptions last evening.

Maj. Gen. Henry B. Sayler, who retires today as Assistant to the Chief of Army Ordnance, was honored at a party from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. at the Officers Club at Fort McNair. Hosts were members of the general's Ordnance Department staff.

On the other side of the city at the Statler Hotel, Rear Adm. John J. Manning was honor guest at a party marking his retirement after 32 years in the Navy. Members of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks and of Civil Engineers arranged the party.

Joanne Wharton, Lowry Coe to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce Wharton announce the engagement of their daughter, Joanne Clark, to Lowry N. Coe, jr., son of Mrs. Edith Gray Coe of Chevy Chase, Md., and Lowry N. Coe of Washington.

Miss Wharton is a gradute of Holton Arms School and Duke University where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Her fiance, a former Navy Ensign, also graduated from Duke.

Mrs. Burrows Returns

Mrs. Edith Burrows has returned to her apartment at 4801 Connecticut ave., after spending five months visiting in California.

Mrs. Truman To Return Dec. 8

MRS. TRUMAN will return from her Key West, Fla., vacation in time to attend the wedding December 8 of White House aide Comdr. Jesse B. Gay, jr., to Miss Barbara Slingluff. The ceremony will take place in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

Following the wedding, the First Lady will leave for St. Louis, Mo., where she will spend the holidays, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Edith Helm, White House social secretary.

Justice, Mrs. Vinson Honored at Dinner

CHIEF JUSTICE and Mrs. Fred Vinson were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz entertained at dinner last evening at their home on Foxhall rd.

The Belgian Ambassador Baron Robert Silvercruys and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Charles Sawyer were among the guests.

The Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, was host at a stag luncheon at the embassy on Monday, entertaining in honor of Mejmet A. Tainey, chief of the Turkish delegation to the OEEC in Paris, now a visitor to Washington.

Too Daring

Queen Vetoes Dior Neckline For Margaret

London, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Copies of Princess Margaret's low-cut evening dress—vetoed by the Queen because it was too revealing—flooded London shops today while London and Paris designers argued over whether it was too daring.

A shop in Bond st. diplomatically removed the dress "in deference to the royal family" after it became known that Queen Elizabeth had called in her personal dressmaker to bring the plunging neckline back into the bounds of propriety.

The French viewpoint, as enunciated by a spokesman for Christian Dior, was that very few dresses are too low cut especially not this one. Dior, the French couturier, designed the dress, using 20 yards of white tulle, five yards of white satin and a bit of crinoline.

The British viewpoint, offered by a spokesman for Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker, who took a couple of tucks in the neckline at her request, was that "the dress was nice but a little too low for a royal princess. It showed too much bosom."

Margaret ordered the dress from Dior without the Queen's knowledge. When she wore it for the first time at a private dinner party, Queen Elizabeth hurried her daughter to her dressmaker for neckline alterations.

Hadassah Gains 500 Members in Drive

By Nicha Souré

THE WASHINGTON Chapters of Hadassah are richer by 500 new members—and two honorary ones—it was announced at the victory membership rally last night.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, "a distinguished citizen of the United States and a great humanitarian," and Mrs. Eliahu Elath, wife of the Israeli Ambassador and "a servant of the Jewish people," were inducted as honorary members of Hadassah at the rally.

Yesterday was the culmination of the H-Day membership campaign which began on November 8. Mrs. Benjamin Manchester, club president, made the awards; reminded the club members that it was fitting the finale be held "on November 29, the second anniversary of the United Nations decision to give international sanction to the creation of the Jewish state in Israel."

Mrs. Meyer, accepting the certificate of membership, said, "One of your programs stands out in my mind because it exemplifies Hadassah's usual generosity and gives the world an example of interracial tolerance. That is your prenatal and postnatal program for mothers and infants—a program which serves Jewish and Arab women alike. By such kindliness you will do more to conquer ancient animosities than can ever be achieved by formal international agreements."

Mrs. Elath said she hoped that the women of Hadassah would some day be rewarded for their efforts by a visit to Israel where they could see with their own eyes what they have accomplished.

On display at the Jewish Community Center where the rally was held was a miniature replica of a Youth Aliyah village in Israel, made by the Upper northwest group of Hadassah. In the auditorium were clotheslines hung with knitted and sewn garments made for Israeli children by Washington Hadassah.

ALSO on display was a tray showing a well-balanced school lunch according to American standards. Hadassah has served 30,000 such lunches daily to the children of Israel.

Final figures for the membership drive were not available at last night's rally since applications were still coming in to boost the 3000 Washington Hadassah membership.

For their work in bringing in new members, Mrs. Joseph Freedman, membership chairman, and Mrs. Emmanuel Cohen, cochairman, presented awards to the following Hadassah members:

Mrs. Stanley Wertlieb and Mrs. Rachel Kossow, upper Northwest group; Mrs. M. W. Mrs. Elath was presented by the Hadassah chapters with a specially-ordered Israeli flag designed for the reception room of the Embassy of Israel.

Clubwomen's Aid for Polio Fund Sought

Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, chairman of the District's first Women's Division, March of Dimes, yesterday called upon club women to "turn dimes into dollars" in the 1950 campaign.

She issued her appeal to some 90 representatives and presidents of women s organizations at a luncheon meeting given by the Women's Activities Committee for the 1950 March of Dimes Drive.

In enlisting the aid of feminine groups, Mrs. Magdeburger, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, pointed out that this is the first time women have been invited to participate as a special group in the District's drive. The campaign will open in January.

Predicts Success

Edgar Morris, general chairman of the D. C. March of Dimes, predicted that with the help of women the 1950 campaign will be the most successful to date. George Voss, epidemic coordinator, said 14 million dollars must be raised nationally.

A first-hand account of how polio struck his family was given by Robert M. Averill, executive assistant to the president of Capital Airlines.

Three years ago three of his children became ill—but the cases were mistakenly diagnosed as influenza. A week later his 30-year-old wife complained of the same symptoms: high fever, aching joints. The children recovered. But Mrs. Averill will never be able to walk again. She must now spend all but ten minutes a day in a respirator.

Cost Is High

Mr. Averill estimated that hospitalization and continued care already has cost nearly $40,000, of which he has been able to pay $10,000. The remaining expense was carried by the Foundation. Few families can bear the tremendous cost of polio treatment without help, Mr. Averill pointed out.

Mr. Wilson studied at St. Alban's School in Washington and St. Mark's in Southboro, Mass. He was graduated from Harvard in 1942. During the war he served as a naval aviator and holds the rank of lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He is now taking postgraduate work at George Washington University. His marriage to Mrs. Julie Brown Colt was terminated by divorce.

Miss Harker Wed To G. B. DeLozier; On Bermuda Trip

The marriage of Miss Marjorie K. Harker to George B. DeLozier took place November 26 at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, with Dr. John Rustin officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. K. Y. Harker of Phoenix, Ariz., and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. George DeLozier of Washington.

Given in marriage by her brother, H. Eugene Harker of Falls Church, Va., the bride wore navy blue with white accessories and carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

On return from their Bermuda honeymoon the newlyweds will reside in this city. Mrs. DeLozier, an alumna of Iowa State Teachers College, has been employed by The Washington Post as assistant classified advertising manager. Her husband is real estate advertising manager for The Post.

Keep in Trim

To Reduce at Any Season, Cut Your Calorie Count

This is the third of three articles on winter slimming.

By Ida Jean Kain

AT SECOND BLUSH, you'll reluctantly agree that you need no more food for fuel in January with the room temperature set at 70 degrees, than in June at 70 degrees. Stoke up with high-fuel foods that top your calorie limits, and come June you, too, will be bursting out all over.

IDA JEAN KAIN

So don't let the nip in the air lull you into the false notion you actually need extra food in winter, particularly if your favorite sport is reading a good book by the fire.

Fat can come only from excess calories, summer or winters, which brings up the question—how many calories do you need to stay at normal weight this winter? That depends on your energy requirements.

The Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances set the calories at 2000 per day for the sedentary woman and 2400 a day for the sedentary man. Sedentary work includes office work and light housekeeping. For example, the typist uses the same number of calories per hour as the woman ironing uses. A factory worker who sits down to a machine is still doing sedentary work.

A moderately active woman requires 2400 calories a day. This covers the woman who does her own work and takes care of a good-sized family. A physically active man uses 3000 calories a day. A very active woman, that is one doing hard physical work such as farm work, would use 3000 calories a day.

Go by the Scales

THESE CALORIE allowances represent group averages and must be adjusted up or down to meet specific needs. In other words, if you do sedentary work you may or may not be entitled to 2000 calories a day. Again, go by the scales. If you gain on that many calories, that is proof you do not burn that many.

Another sedentary worker might lose weight on that number of calories, which would indicate that she likes to walk and takes more exercise outside of her job. Physical activity steps up calorie needs. Cold weather can make a small difference if you are out in it.

You will be interested to know that the recommended calorie allowances are less than they were formerly. In many categories they are 100 calories a day less. There is just one reason for lowering the calories—the average weight gain was too high.

Intake Equals Output

YOUR INDIVIDUAL calorie requirements are determined by the number you use in daily activity. If you maintain normal weight year in and year out, then your food intake, measured in terms of calories, equals your energy output. If you eat too much, you store fat; if you eat too little, you lose weight . . . it's that simple.

To reduce at any season, cut your normal calorie requirements from one half to one third less, but make sure that the protective foods are included in normal amounts.

Every once in a while the white coat turns up as a winter coat fashion. I remember when I was a college freshman—years ago—white chinchilla coats were the smart winter uniform on campus and I hounded my family until I got one too!

White coats are a smart fashion this winter and I think it will be a white coat Christmas. White fleeces—white chinchillas—white tweeds—look wonderful in white short-coats to wear over suits—or in belted great coats and long flaring coats that are complete cover-ups.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Her Experience as Hostess, Woman Has Met Only Two Types of House Guest, and Both Types Leave Her Exhausted; Is She Too Conscientious?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In my experience there are two types of guests,—those who do nothing when staying with us, and the other kind who take over the house. Or is there an in-between type?

And what of the hostess? Are there actually people who feel glad to see visitors arrive and sorry to see them go? Or does every hostess feel as I do—glad to see guests arrive, and equally glad to bid them goodbye?

I always look forward to a visit of any length from anyone; yet always I find myself exhausted by the time they leave. I am exhausted not by the extra work, but by the effort to keep up endless conversation, and by always having someone special to consider. In short, by having no time for myself. Maybe I try too hard.

All this concerns my husband's relatives who live quite a distance from here and will be visiting us occasionally, thus confronting me with a problem every time. I realize I need better perspective on the whole situation, and your suggestions will be appreciated.

A. H.

Probably Hostess Tires Guests, Too

DEAR A. H.: There is a lot of shadow boxing and a glimmer of awareness mixed into your recital of your distress. You start by complaining that all guests (in your experience) come under one or the other of two headings, namely, either passive or active nuisances.

But then with intuitive good sense you modify this criticism by suggesting that maybe there is some distortion in your attitude, maybe you try too hard, etc. At this point you begin to study yourself, which is the beginning of wisdom.

You want to know why you have so little tolerance of guests in your home for several days, why you are so wearied by their presence, when the extra work is really no strain. And I think the nub of the matter is that you wear yourself out acting a part on these occasions, instead of behaving in keeping with your real self and normal pace.

If such is the case, as I believe, then of course your tension would be picked up by the guests, they couldn't help it; and they would begin to respond at the same pitch, thus establishing a vicious circle and costly drain on nervous energy, with the result that they would be as tired as you, and of the same mind to say goodbye, when the hour for leavetaking came.

Wearied by Always Acting Defensively

TO BE a comfortable hostess who enjoys the fellowship of her own hospitality, you've got to be on good terms with yourself, so that you feel presentable or acceptable to guests on the basis of what you are, not especially for what you have of worldly goods, nor what you can "do" for them—and so that the emphasis is on the great human experience of mutual interest, and not on the surroundings or the program provided, whether sparse or splendid.

For another suggestion, many shy sensitive persons have great difficulty trying to conduct a tete-a-tete for any length of time with individuals other than well seasoned intimates; and in general this kind of difficulty takes its rise from fixated unconscious fear (implanted in childhood) that accidental self revelation is apt to have consequences painful or embarrassing.

In the grip of that kind of tension, persons are compulsively defensive in social exchange, and one of their defensive techniques—used by you—is to talk a great deal, to ward off "threatening" closeness. But to understand the drift is sufficient to dissolve it, so if that's your trouble, a habit of awareness should clear it up.

Indonesian Food Is Good, But 'Hot Stuff'

By Lucia Brown

EXOTIC dishes from the legendary "Spice Islands" were sampled with delight by guests at Madame H. G. Wattimena's luncheon yesterday.

The menu was a preview of what you can make with recipes in "Adventures in Indonesian Cookery," a new booklet by the gentle, brown-eyed wife of the First Secretary of the Netherland's Embassy. Madame Wattimena has written it to raise money to rebuild a Christian church destroyed by wartime bombs in her native Amboina.

Fricadel (a minced meat casserole) and Piendeng Telor (eggs in soy sauce) were two substantial dishes at yesterday's feast, given at the 33d pl. home of Baron and Baroness Rengers. Besides, there were several "sambels," a word which Madame Wattimena defined as "hot stuff."

Good With Rice

These were variously made of corn, string beans and shrimp, each in a sea of savory sauce which combined beautifully with generous servings of fluffy white rice.

Really hot was another "sambel" made of crushed red peppers. Madame Wattimena doesn't give the recipe for this one in her book, believing it too peppery to please American palates. The Indonesians—in common with most people of warm climes—have a particular fondness for highly seasoned foods.

Gives a Recipe

Here is her recipe for the Piendang Telor, a sweet-sour dish to serve along with rice and a salad, or with a green vegetable for luncheon or supper:

PIENDANG TELOR
(Eggs in Soy Sauce)

- 4 eggs, hard-boiled
- 1 big onion
- 1 tomato
- ½ red pepper or 2 hot ones
- ½ clove garlic chopped
- 1 small piece fresh ginger, finely chopped
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- ½ cup water

Cut the eggs in two and put them in deep dish. Slice the onion, pepper, and tomato. Put the oil or butter in frying pan and start frying the garlic, onions, and ginger. Then add peppers, tomatoes, and sugar. After this, add water, vinegar, and last of all, soy sauce. It has to taste sweet yet sour. Pour this sauce over the egg.

Madame Wattimena's little cookbook will be sold at the YWCA bookshop.

De Luxe Tourists Dredge Up Amusing Bits of Trivia As Souvenirs From Abroad

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE RETURNING crop of de luxe tourists dredge up all sorts of entertaining trivia from the autumnal scene. For instance—that Dior evening gown of Princess Margaret's which made recent headlines due to its plunging neckline (Queen Elizabeth immediately had it stitched up a few inches). It is fashioned of white satin with a complicated overskirt of stiffened white tulle which stands out so far behind that no one understands how the princess can sit down.

Salon Doubles as Ballroom

THE Charles E. Bohlens, after seven years of arid Washington make-do on a slim State Department salary, are now, due to his job as Minister to France, getting some of their just deserts. Washington friends are delighted to find them figuratively knee-deep in servants, spare bathrooms and a salon so huge it can double as a ballroom. Facts Sifted, Not Explained

THIS COMING Saturday, the Florida State Society is taking over Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria for an afternon and evening bout of bridge, chess, cantas, dancing, games and eating. This brings to mind one of the most intriguing mysteries hereabouts. It took place in 1816, has never been solved and might well be titled the Mystery of the Female Stranger.

The facts have been sifted by Joseph Schwarzmann of the Alexandria Gazette and run as follows: On a rainy night in 1816, the door to Gadsby's Tavern was shoved open, disclosing a pale gentleman with a veiled woman on his arm and followed by a slave carrying a big sea chest. The gentleman, in British accent, asked for the best accommodations the tavern afforded. Shortly afterward a doctor and a nurse were called for and, three days later the veiled woman died.

Her name was never mentioned nor was that of her masculine companion though he tarried at the tavern for several weeks. He paid his indebtedness in English notes which, when presented at a bank, were not honored. The gentleman disappeared leaving behind his sea chest which, on thorough search, provided no clue to his identity.

The lady, however, was buried in St. Paul's cemetery in Alexandria and on her tombstone was engraved the following epitaph. "To the memory of a Female Stranger whose mortal suffering finished on the eleventh day of October, 1816, age 23 years and 6 months. This stone is placed here by her disconsolate husband in whose arms she sighed out her last breath and who, under God, did his best to soothe even the cold dear ear of death."

Several theories were advanced. First, that the lady was of royal blood and eloped with a commoner; second, that she was Theodosia Burr, who supposedly disappeared in a shipwreck. To make the mystery even more exciting, neither the local doctor nor the nurse, who lived to a ripe 97 years, ever disclosed a word about the young woman they had cared for.

Some years later, an Alexandrian, on a visit to Sing-Sing Prison, claimed to have recognized the Englishman, who supposedly spoke to him. But his name meant nothing.

Anyway, any Floridians partying Saturday should stop off at St. Paul's and see the Female Stranger's tomb.

About Remodeling Tweed Coat for Daughter

I have a Haris tweed grey boxy type coat, size 14, of 1942 vintage, which I would like to remodel into a coat for my daughter, who takes size 9. Should I try to cut down and take in the coat as it is, or should I rip it up, iron out the pieces, and cut from a pattern for size 9? Does the Government or any other organization publish a booklet on remodeling clothing? K. A.

The most satisfactory remaking job is done by taking the original coat entirely apart, washing and pressing the pieces, and recutting it. By doing it this way, you can use the reverse side of the fabric for the right side if it appears to be better than the original right side. The wrong side is very apt to have the color and finish of a new fabric if it has been covered with a lining.

Use a mild soap and lukewarm water to wash the fabric. Wash in two soapy waters to get completely clean. When it is completely dry, steam press by placing a heavy wet cloth on top and using a hot iron.

There is an excellent Government bulletin called "Make-Overs from Coats and Suits." It may be obtained by writing Superintendent of Documents, United States Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. Ask for miscellaneous Bulletin No. 545. The price is 10 cents per copy.

Do any of your readers know the name and address of a shop in San Francisco which sells silk shantung by mail? The shop is well known. A. L.

Any folks from San Francisco among our readers?

Can you suggest an inexpensive gift for a couple who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary? H. L.

Any one of the many items which can be printed with the couple's names in gold make thoughtful, useful, and comparatively inexpensive gifts. Such items might include paper napkins, paper guest towels, note paper or stationery, guest book or snapshot album. Also, household linens in gold color are considered proper for golden anniversary gifts.

I am searching for a business establishment that will purchase a woman's coat. The item was purchased from one of the well-known department stores of Washington and has been worn only four times. R. R. R.

There are several shops in the city which handle used clothes on a consignment basis. These are located on Old Georgetown rd., telephone Oliver 6063; at 2001 Massachusetts ave. nw., Columbia 0005; 4715 Hampden lane, Wisconsin 9843; South Royal st. in Alexandria, telephone Alexandria 0649. I suggest you call the shops and discuss your problem with them before taking in your coat.

Could you please tell me an easy way to clean the oven of an electric stove? Using steel wool and "elbow grease" is too hard on my hands and disposition—yet this is the only way I've found to clean the oven after broiling a steak. M. H. S.

Try this: When the oven is entirely cool, wipe down the sides with an ammonia-dampened cloth. Over the bottom of the oven, place a paper towel which has been wet with ammonia. Now, close the oven door and let it stand undisturbed overnight. In the morning, when the ammonia has softened the deposit and your spirits are high, remove the discoloration with steel wool. It should be comparatively easy.

I've always been in favor of an ounce of prevention, especially where a pound of energy was involved, so here's a preventive suggestion: Before you put your steak in the oven to broil, line the broiling pan and the sides of the oven with aluminum foil. Arrange the foil on the sides so any spatters will run into the pan. When the steak is broiled, the drippings can be easily poured off the foil for pan gravy and you've no grease left on the sides of the oven to burn and brown the next time it is turned on.

I want to make flannel bags for some of my sterling hollow ware. Should the flannel be treated with anything special in order to keep the silver from tarnishing? K. A.

Yes, it would be a good idea to use a tarnish preventive flannel for the bags. The flannel, already treated, can be purchased by the piece in housewares departments where silver polishes are sold.

When my husband was stationed in North Carolina, I first heard of the term "cake cutting." Down there it referred to a large reception given the evening before the wedding (after the rehearsal usually), at which the gifts were displayed and refreshments similar to a wedding reception were served. The highlight of the evening was when the bride-to-be (in either street or evening clothes) cut her wedding cake. The following day, the wedding would be held and there would be no wedding reception as such after the ceremony, the bride and groom departing on their wedding trip. Another interesting Southern custom is that the bride's cake must have a touch of green on it, usually in the decorative frosting. K. C. T.

Thank you, K. C. T., for this interesting bit of information. Thank you, also, J. F. R. of Washington and A. C. H. of Front Royal, Va., who also informed us that "cake cutting" is a tradition of long standing in North Carolina.

I'm pleased to pass along a tip from M. S. of Alexandria in regard to restoring the color in fabrics caused by perspiration stains. She says that recently she attempted to restore color by the use of ammonia and had excellent results by stretching the stained area over a bowl containing ammonia and leaving it overnight? In the morning the color had returned and an expensive blouse was restored.

One on the Aisle—

'Brigadoon' Leaner But Wearing Well

By Richard L. Coe

"BRIGADOON," or, as Beatrice Lillie calls it, "Digabroom," is now halfway through its third year and is playing Ford's Theater, Baltimore, this week.

I went over to the opening to see how this musical charmer is bearing up after more than a year's run in New York and a year and a half on the road. I'd seen its second New York performance, was entranced by the whole thing and was curious to see whether Blossomtimitis had begun to set in.

Inevitably, there are some traces of this disease, but on the whole the show holds up nicely. Especially the dances.

For in "Brigadoon," Agnes de Mille has given us her most enjoyable patterns since "Oklahoma!" (this week that one's splitting its time between Vancouver and Seattle). With David Folkes' still-fresh, lovely costumes of plaids and color, the dances are exciting and wholly entrancing. What's more, they're being performed with surprising zest by a well-drilled group. The more one sees of our American musicals, the more one marvels at the quality of dancing from chorus members to principals. Here's one aspect of the modern American theater that is head and shoulders over the ensemble work of prewar days.

That exciting chase at the beginning of the second act for a recalcitrant member of the sleeping town, the circles and squares of the wedding dance and the precision of the sword dance are still eye-filling treats, with Kenneth LeRoy as the principal dancer and James Jamieson, freshly returned from the London company to which he shortly goes back, leading the ensemble.

Frederick Loewe's lovely score ("Once in the Highlands," "Down on MacConnachy Square," "Waiting for My Darling," "I'll Go Home with Bonnie Jean," "The Heather on the Hill," "Come to Me, Bend to Me," "There But for You Go I" and "Almost Like Being in Love") remains a delight, but it's thin in execution.

Railroads and Unions

That the show's music has lost some of its lush, romantic freshness is understandable, but too bad.

For one thing, it's understandable because while it used to cost me $2.78 for a round-trip ticket to Baltimore, Monday it set me back $3.11. Multiply this by the railroad bills of a large, touring theatrical company and you have one reason for cutting down on the number of singers. My guess is that there are now a dozen less singers in it than when I saw it in New York.

Then there's the orchestra. It's the practice of touring musicals to carry their own key musicians and conductor, filling out in each town with musicians locally hired at union rates. These rates are a minimum of $125 a week, with little rehearsal allowance except at heavy overtime. The result was that, strain as he did, Conductor Ignace Strasfogel couldn't begin to get the rich and sawing tones demanded by Ted Royal's orchestration of the Loewe music.

Economic Hurdles

These two economic causes, of course, beset producers and audiences still faithful to the road. Producer Cheryl Crawford is certainly to be congratulated for having done as well by "Brigadoon" as she has, for Ford's audience obviously enjoyed itself thoroughly, rightly allotting its greatest appreciation for the dances. But deterioration of the music is bad for the road. The English ballet suffered badly from it here.

Of the principals, the two light comedy roles are the best handled. Peter Turgeon has a dry, well-timed delivery as the hero's pal, and Susan Johnson's diction for her Ado Annie-like songs is splendid. Neither Hayes Gordon nor Virginia Oswald, in the roles created by David Brooks and Marion Bell, are up to the originals, but they're by no means failures. And Miss Bell would be hard to follow.

This is the Theater Guild-American Theater Society's first offering in the Baltimore subscription season. Ford's has nothing after this week until December 19, when Tennessee Williams' "Summer and Smoke" will be done by Tod Andrews and the original Dallas company.

SLOW WEEK in the local movie houses . . . Only the Warner and the Dupont will be offering new bills . . . The former opens Betty Hutton in "Red, Hot and Blue," Thursday . . . Today Shaw's "Major Barbara" opens a revival at the Dupont, with Wendy Hiller and Rex Harrison in the leads.

SEATS ARE NOW on sale at Mrs. Stabler's in Jordan's, 13th and G, for "The Public Bosom," that play about Washington by Newsmen George Garrott and George Copeland . . . The Department of Agriculture's Players are presenting this "and one other play" (?) at the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Auditorium on Friday and Saturday nights, December 9 and 10.

JOSE LIMON gives his dance recital under sponsorship of the Institute of Contemporary Arts in Lisner Auditorium tonight at 8:40.

400 Items Produced in Europe Salable Here, Merchants Say

An organization of American merchants yesterday presented to the Economic Cooperation Administration a detailed study showing just what European products they can sell to American users.

The study, prepared by the National Retail Dry Goods Association, lists some 400 items, not including food, wines, toys and luxury items, that it believes the Marshall Plan countries can export to the United States and thus earn desperately needed dollars.

The listing goes into detail to show the maximum landed price that each item must have if it is to be sold here, the delivery dates required, as well as size, color and other specifications.

The report was presented at a lunch to Paul G. Hoffman, ECA head. He said he would give it the widest possible distribution in Europe, in order that producers could seize the opportunity it presented to increase their exports.

In a statement accompanying the report, the merchants' association urged the improvement of cumbersome tariff restrictions as a way to permit Europe to earn more dollars.

But it warned the European countries that their solution to the dollar problem also lay in eliminating exchange controls, establishing stable currencies, learning to meet the special desires of American customers and reorganizing their production to obtain lower costs and prices.

HOLDING OVER: Ethel Waters and Jeanne Crain in "Pinky," the fine drama which will remain for a second week on the Palace screen. Ethel Barrymore and William Lundigan are other principals. Miss Waters tonight concludes an "in person" engagement at the Blue Mirror, the night spot—at 824 14th st.

Hongkong Is Safe, Slim Says

By the United Press

Field Marshal Sir William J. Slim, British army chief of staff, said yesterday that Britain has "every intention" of holding Hongkong.

"If the Chinese Communists are foolish enough to attack it," he said at a press conference, "we shall hold it. But I do not think they will do so."

Slim, who has been conferring with United States defense officials on North Atlantic Defense Pact and other matters, said he would like to see an Asian pact against communism.

Asked if the Chinese Nationalists can hold Formosa, he said they should be able to as long as they can command the sea and air approaches to the new Nationalist stronghold.

Discussing Britain's responsibilities under MAP, he said his country already has troops on the European continent. He said no expansion of those forces is planned at present.

"But, of course, if war came it would be very different," he said.

Truman With Lots Of Time on Hands Has Watch Fixed

Key West, Fla., Nov. 29 (AP).—President Truman, a man with lots of time on his hands, picked today to get his watch repaired.

The officer on duty at the Navy's ship's service store looked up with some surprise when the Commander in Chief strode in, unannounced.

"It just stopped running," Mr. Truman blurted out. "I don't know what's the matter with it."

He looked the picture of the carefree Florida vacationist, standing there in his old blue cotton trousers, blue, open-necked sports shirt and white yachting cap.

Time seemed so unimportant for this gray-haired visitor, here to swim, walk and sun bathe and possibly to fish, if his staff insists.

Gaelic Secretary to Talk

Britons Suggest Limited Salary For Film Stars

London Nov. 30 (U.P.).—A government committee suggested today that Britain's film stars accept "a limited basic salary," receiving more money only if a picture makes it at the box office.

The recommendation came from a committee set up by Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade.

20 Hurt in Trolley Crash

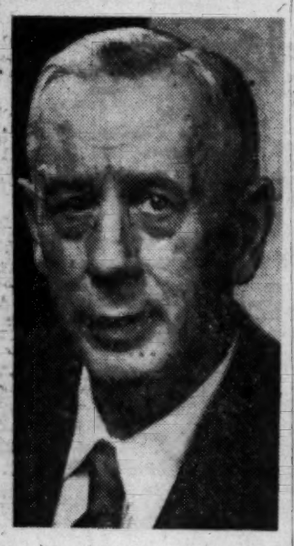
Morse, U. S. Soybean Ace, Retires Today

* * * * * * *



WILLIAM J. MORSE
Will grow more soybeans

William J. Morse, virtual father of the soybean in United States, is scheduled to retire today after 42 years with the United States Department of Agriculture here.

So what's he going to do? He's going to grow soybeans for his dinner table, and he's going to write a book about food—soybean food.

Morse, who lives at 6809 5th st. nw., Takoma Park, entered the Agriculture Department in 1907. That was just when the Bureau of Plant Industry was planning to carry on research on soybeans.

More Than a Century

Soybeans then weren't new to United States. Introduced from time to time from China, Manchuria, Korea, and Japan, they had been cultivated in this country for more than a century. But the annual crop was only about 100,000 bushels—small pickings, relatively.

Today soybean production is a sizable prop in the Nation's agronomy, which is the same as saving the Nation's economy. The annual yield is now put at 200 million bushels, and soybean production is no wlisted on the grain exchanges.

Much of the increase in production has come in the past 20 years, and much of it is credited to the work Morse did in cultivating the varieties on acres of land which now accommodate Government Girls, Arlington Farms. Morse recalled yesterday how he planted his first crop in 1907 and how he had acres in cultivation in 1938 when the last crop there was harvested.

Research in Asia

From 1929 to 1931 Morse spent two years in Asiatic lands seeking out soybean plants and other crops. He returned with hundreds of varieties, many of which helped improve the strains already here.

Today Morse said with a trace of pardonable pride huge American shipments of soybeans are going to China in relief programs. Like shipping coal to Newcastle, since China once was the soybean land.

Two years ago the Agriculture Department gave Morse a Superior Service Award. That same year the American Soybean Association, which he headed three times, gave him an honorary life membership.

Morse is dead serious about writing that book on soybean foods. So serious, he said, that it is one reason he's retiring at 65. He could stay on another five years under Federal retirement regulations. He's also serious about raising his own table crop. He likes soybeans.

To Move to Yonkers

He and his wife plan to move soon to a suburban residence near Yonkers, N. Y., for that house, den and garden he'll need for living, writing and planting.

Besides the book on soybean foods, the retiring agronomist wants to write a book on Oriental plants, incorporating a lot of information he picked up in the Orient. He can write; he's already written the "bible" of soybean production, published in 1923 and still considered the standard work on the subject.

It's named "The Soybean."

It nettles Morse sometimes to have people ask him what the soybean is used for. The uses now number more than 150, from soybean milk for children allergic to cow's milk to soybean flour most people don't realize is in bread and doughnuts because they don't read the small print.

Industrially, too, the soybean is important. About 85 percent of soybean oil, Morse estimated yesterday, is used in making margarines and shortenings. Still other goes into paints and varnishes.

Dr. Gilchrist, 3 Others Are Retired From VA

Dr. Edgar Y. Gilchrist, medical officer with the Board of Veterans Appeals, will retire today after more than 45 years of Government service.

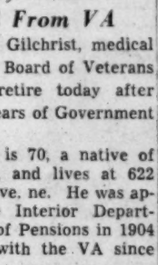
Dr. Gilchrist is 70, a native of Wolfeburg, Pa., and lives at 622 Massachusetts ave. ne. He was appointed to the Interior Department's Bureau of Pensions in 1904 and has been with the VA since 1930.

He is a graduate of the old Columbian University Medical School, now George Washington University Medical School. He plans to "just loaf and take life easy."

Three other VA employes are retiring today: Mrs. Hazel P. Richards, 3813 Veazey st. nw., employe relations assistant in the personnel relations and training service, with 32 years of service; Raymond Campbell, 3530 10th st. nw., messenger, claims statistics service, with more than 30 years' service, and Daniel M. Wolfe, 1516 Upshur st, nw., retirement clerk, payees' accounts service, with 32 years and four months service.

Golf Clubs Presented To Capt. Louis W. Bates

Capt. Louis W. Bates, USNR, senior consultant with the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, was honored by coworkers yesterday on his retirement after 35 years service.



Capt. Bates

Testimonials and golf clubs were presented at a luncheon in Arlington Farms Recreation Building.

Bates, who lives at 5430 Connecticut ave. nw., joined the bureau in 1917 as an electrical and mechanical aide. Entering the Civil Engineer Corps Reserve in 1925 as a lieutenant commander, he was a captain in World War II, helping mobilize public utilities for defense power needs.

After the war he resumed his civilian post at the Bureau of Yards and Docks. He holds degrees as electrical and mechanical engineer from Columbia University.

'Proclaimer' Ralph Norton Ends 34-Year Career

Ralph A. Norton, who has written 250 proclamations for the Commissioners in eight years, will retire today after 34 years in the District government.

Since 1941 Norton has been assistant secretary to the Board of Commissioners. Before that he was secretary to seven different Commissioners.

In his present job of writing proclamations ("whereas . . . whereas . . . now, therefore") Norton has called upon the citizenry to hang out flags, be kind to animals and study up on Brazilian customs.

Just eligible for retirement on Thanksgiving Day, he plans to give full time to his 87-acre tobacco farm in Calvert County, Md.

Succeeding Norton as assistant secretary will be G. Adolph Turner, 40, administrative officer of the Department of Inspection.

Police Dept. Retires Willard H. Garner

Corpl. Willard H. Garner, 50, of the Fifth Police Precinct, was ordered retired on a $167.72 monthly pension by the Commissioners yesterday because of a nervous ailment incurred in line of duty. Garner had served nearly 28 years in the department.

Lane Word On School Fund Sought

Assurance from Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland that money will be forthcoming from the State for proposed school projects was asked yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Prince Georges County Commissioners in Upper Marlboro, Md.

The resolution points out that the board of education of the county has received a favorable bid of $1,326,500, which is $686,431 less than the estimated cost, for construction of a 49-room high school to accommodate 1500 children and that the bid must be accepted by December 7.

It points out further that the county had expected to receive funds from the Board of Public Works under the public school construction bond issue of 1949, declared invalid by the Maryland Court of Appeals, and is without funds for this and other pending projects for which bids had been asked.

Governor Lane was requested to give assurance that the money will be forthcoming from the State in time to meet the initial payments due contractors and architects and inform the commissioners whether they should commit themselves to proceeding with this project and other pending school projects before December 6.

County Warns Trailer Camps On Permit Law

Operators of trailer camps in Montgomery County were warned yesterday by the county council that they must comply with a State law governing licensing and regulating such establishments.

Councilman Frederic P. Lee instructed the council's clerk to send copies of the warning statement approved at yesterday's meeting to "all known camps."

Enforcement of the law, enacted in February, 1948, has been delayed pending the formation of the county's department of inspections and licenses, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said. A. Morton Thomas, recently appointed department head, was directed by the council specifically to administer and enforce the law.

February 1 was set as the final date for application for 1950 licenses.

County ordinances to regulate purchase of firearms and to prevent juveniles from playing pinball machines were recommended by Lieut. G. W. Linthicum.

10-Cent Pay Phone Rate Suggested

19-Year Project

Dial System Completion Set Dec. 17

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s 19-year project to convert Washington to the dial telephone will be completed December 17.

By then the Ludlow-3 exchange, last manual exchange in the system, will be completely switched over to the dial system.

At present 3000 subscribers in Northeast and Southwest Washington still need the help of the 66 operators in the old building at 629 B st. nw. to put through calls.

Many Ludlow-3 subscribers already have the new-fangled gadgets installed. One by one they'll be informed, between now and December 17, that they're on their own. Each switchover will take about a second. Thus will end the project which began in 1930 when the old Main and Franklin exchanges were converted and became the District, National and Metropolitan exchanges.

The switch was originally scheduled for 1941, company officials said. Delayed at first by the war, it was again put off by the tremendous postwar increase in demand for telephones.

The timing of the Ludlow-3 switch, according to John M. Howard, general commercial manager, will coincide with the deadline for issuance of new telephone directories and opening of the new Brookland Building at Lawrence and 12 sts. ne.

The building, which cost $1,025,000 with an additional $1,100,000 for equipment, will relieve the Dupont exchange and will be the Lawrence-6 exchange. It has a capacity for 30,000 lines, although only 10,000 will be used at first.

The Ludlow-3 center was opened in 1907 as the Lincoln exchange. When part of the Lincoln system went dial and moved out, the remaining manual lines became the Ludlow exchange.

Built for a capacity of 10,000 lines it could handle all numbers from LU-3-0000 to LU-3-9999—the old building is operating at a fraction of its capacity.

The 66 operators who service the manual phones are kept fairly busy, but as Mark B. Kiernan, central office foreman, says, they sometimes "feel like lost property around here."

"But secretly, they love the old setup," Kiernan adds. Speaking for girls, Mrs. J. M. Johnson, supervisor, says nostalgia will be neutralized by new jobs they'll be transferred to when the machine age moves in. "The board is hard work," Mrs. Johnson says.

The LUdlow-3 subscribers will be spread among the Lincoln 3, 4, 6, and 7 exchanges centered in the Anacostia Building at 28th st. and Minnesota ave. se.

A Government attorney yesterday suggested a 10-cent rate for coin telephone calls in Washington, but phone company officials promptly opposed the idea.

Attorney John J. Kirby, of the General Services Administration, suggested the 10-cent rate for calls that now cost a nickel, during an all-day District PUC hearing on the proposed average 13 percent increase in local phone rates here.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., said he had given preliminary study to doubling the coin box rate but had decided "this is not the time to do it."

Howard said it would require considerable time to procure and install the equipment in the 11,000 pay stations here. He estimated the changeover might cost up to $500,000, and predicted the number of pay station calls with a 10-cent local rate might drop off 25 to 35 percent.

Kirby pointed out the New York Telephone Co., has made application for a 10-cent coin box rate for local calls. Kirby also presented figures showing the Federal Government here, whose service represents 14 percent of C. & P. business, stands to pay 24.4 percent of the additional phone company revenue.

Kirby said the Federal Government's annual expense for local calls in Washington is now $3,566,000, and the new rates would add $793,000 to that, or an increase in the Government's local phone bill here of about 22.24 percent.

D. A. Kosh, chief of the Public Utilities Division of the Bureau of Federal Supply, GSA, said the Government's aim in the rate case is to find out what the minimum reasonable increase has to be.

In earlier testimony, C. H. Johnson, vice president and general manager of the telephone company, told the PUC the firm now expects to spend about 12 million dollars next year in building additional facilities. He said the firm expects to spend 40 to 50 million in construction during the next three to five years, including its proposed new administration building at Thomas Circle.

School Registration In Arlington Thursday

Arlington County 6-year-olds, who will enter school for the first time this February 1, should register Thursday at the elementary school in their neighborhood.

School Superintendent William A. Early asked the early registration so school authorities can estimate the need for books, teachers, and equipment. Youngsters who will be 6 before March 1 are eligible to start school in February.

These naturalized, and countries of origin, were: Ferdinand A. Schmiedegon, 66, of 1918 N st. nw., Romania; Mrs. Ana Maria Rankin, 28, of 6704 Lake st., Falls Church, Argentina; Mrs. Andree Gabrielle Augustine, 25, of 6612 Baltimore ave., Hyattsville, France; Gerard A. Burgers, 37, of 1530 16th st. nw., Holland; Marco A. Brolo, 28, of 230 Swann rd. se., Guatemala; Mrs. Dorothy Louise Fielden, 24, of 1701 16th st. nw., Russia, and Mrs. Lisette Barrow, 28, of 2715 31st st. se., Greece.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

DOLORES, beauteous singer with Basil Fomeen's band when he was at the Carlton Hotel's Congo Room, is now appearing at the Wardman Park. Both hotels belong to Washington Properties, Inc., so it's all in the family. When Fomeen decided to take a month's rest after his 11-month stay at the Congo Room, Dolores joined Glenn Williams' outfit in the Wardman Metronome Room.

Dolores

Her new boss Williams plays the piano for his seven-piece band, and should know his music: he was trained at Juilliard, Rochester and Peabody conservatories. He also has been staff conductor for NBC in Chicago, and musician for CBS.

The Wardman Park, especially popular with young people, is a good spot for Dolores. It's one of the nicest places in town for a few cocktails and dances without getting involved with crowds, high prices, etc.

The Metronome Room was crawling with festivities Monday night. Dolores was 20; Joseph Steuart, the real estate man, also had a birthday, and Dick Turner introduced a song that Steuart is sponsoring.

Its author is a local woman, Mrs. Robert Le Baron, frequent tennis doubles partner of the Steuarts. Mrs. Le Baron has written many songs; Steuart was so taken with this one—"Melody"—that he had it published in New York.

Turner is a young accountant. Steuart first heard him sing in—of all places—a YWCA shower, and insisted that he introduce the song. Turner sings tenor in a church choir, but with the exception of that and his shower warbling, his experience lies solely along CPA lines.

Mrs. Le Baron is quite a trouper; a veteran, in fact, of 14 Broadway musical comedies, including Eddie Cantor's "Whoopee." Gustav Heintze wrote the music.

THE Carlton Congo Room now features the eight-piece band of Ramon Ramos, a Mexican banker's son who's been playing that Latin music in this country ever since he graduated from school in the late '20s.

His career started when he met two old friends, Xavier Cugat and Carlos Malina, when he came to the United States via California. After hearing him play the violin, they signed him up with their band. There he stayed until his favorite sport—polo—backfired by injuring his hand. He found he couldn't play the violin, but his hands were still all right for the guitar. So he formed his own band and went right into a Miami Biltmore engagement.

Ramos has been playing at leading hotels ever since, with time out for Navy duty. He's at the Carlton Congo Room indefinitely.

Dairy, Numbers Case Defendant Appeal Decisions

A District milk firm, suing the city government, and a man convicted in a numbers case have appealed their cases to the United States Supreme Court.

Wakefield Dairy, operated by Simpson Bros., Inc., is appealing from a lower court ruling that it cannot collect an additional $4485 from the District government for milk supplied public institutions here in 1946. The case hinges on an OPA "escalator clause" which the Court of Appeals said ended with the death of OPA in mid-1946.

The numbers case involves Bernard Newyahr, who gave his address when arrested in 1948 as 901 New York ave. nw. The Court of Appeals upheld the legality of his arrest, made without a warrant on the evidence of a policeman who had admittedly placed bets himself.

What Is "Progressive" Education?

"Progressive" education is much misunderstood and much maligned these days. Too many consider it the sort of education in which ignorant and inexperienced children carry on by themselves, deciding what they will learn and what they won't. There is much calling for a return to the "fundamentals"—the good old three R's and to moral training.

We parents need to think straight about the education of our children. And it is impossible to do this without the facts. Every effort should be made to get a clear picture of the differences between the conservative school and the modern.

One essential difference is in the emphasis put on the nature of learning. The old school insists the best way to learn is through memorizing facts and figures, acquiring skills that later will be useful. The modern school recognizes the importance of facts and skills but believes that learning best takes place when it is related to something in which the child is greatly interested. The modern approach also stresses the importance of helping children learn to think about problems from the earliest years—to seek out the facts and to use them in understanding.

But such general statements as the above don't help much. It is better to visit schools that follow each of the two major approaches and question the teachers. Then one can draw his own conclusions as to which is better for the youngsters.

Water to Douse Hot Pan Causes $2500 Fire Loss

Fire caused when a Rockville housewife attempted to douse a smoking frying pan with water yesterday ignited kitchen curtains, causing a three-alarm fire.

The flames shot up a dumbwaiter shaft to the third floor of a frame building owned by Mrs. Marie A. Gardiner at 415 West Montgomery ave., firemen reported.

Most of the $2500 damage was caused, they said, to the third floor quarters occupied by the family of Samuel Coleman. Mrs. Gardiner's first floor kitchen was seared and the wall on Dominic Lolli's second floor kitchen was ripped open by firemen to get at flames in the shaft.

It Might Have Been

A hundred moons or more ago . . . I promised to be true . . . And I declared I wanted, dear . . . To share my life with you . . . You meant the very world to me . . . For ever and a day . . . And there was just one little word . . . You ever had to say . . . Perhaps your heart was bashful or . . . The stars were out of sight . . . But all I heard you whisper was . . . A casual good-night . . . And that is why the seasons and . . . The months and years have gone . . . And I have never looked for you . . . To hold you in the dawn . . . To kiss your loving lips again . . . And keep my promise true . . . That all I ever wanted was . . . To share my life with you.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Today We Start With a Shocking Item

Eddie O'Brien of 1825 New Hampshire ave. nw. tells me that his cousin arrived from Boston recently, and was amused to hear about a group called the "District of Columbia Athletic Club." Quipped the cousin:

"The D. C. A. C., eh? A bunch of 'live wires,' no doubt. Yuk, yuk, yuk—that's my current joke."

KID STUFF

Syd Kasper of 527 Monticello dr., Falls Church, Va., tells me that he recently drove his family back here from the Midwest.

His 5-year-old daughter, who is just learning to read, watched the scenery for a while and then asked: "Daddy, what are those signs along the road that say '3220'?"

Syd hadn't noticed any such signs, so he asked her to point one out. It read: "Esso."

PROVOCATIVE, ISN'T IT?

The folks next door are raising cain;
They make an awful din
I think that I shall go insane
If they don't ask me in.

David Kandel
1311 H st. nw.

MISCELLANY

"All The King's Men" at the Playhouse is a pretty good movie, but the animated cartoon on the bill is even better . . . Humphrey Fisher (Wisconsin 7744) would like to hear from the folks in the vicinity of Western ave. and Brookeville rd. who have been feeding his dog, Chips, and sometimes boarding him for several days at a time . . . Charles H. Cunningham, employee activities director of the Agriculture Department's Welfare Association, reminds us that the Agriculture Players would like to hear from anybody who is interested in any phase of play production work—whether they're in the Government or not. Call Republic 4142, extension 5611 . . . Tenants in downtown buildings report that sandblasting makes the exterior look very snappy, but leaves a mess inside. One secretary says: "It's like spending the day at the beach; you come home and comb the sand out of your hair" . . . R. V. Brown of 3274 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., notes that a window sign in a Shirlington food store recently offered its customers some nice "Capone"—probably no relation to Scarface Al . . . Mrs. Philip Marcus of 2020 Henderson ave., Silver Spring, Md., and Capt. Ralph Stanton Barnaby of 1902 Ringgold pl., Philadelphia, Pa., team up to say they're glad Rockville Pike gives uphill traffic two lanes and downhill only one, because they don't like to be stuck behind slow-moving trucks in those single uphill lanes . . . Maybe so, but it seems to me there's more danger of head-on collisions in the center lane that way . . . Ann Kenzer of Hyattsville, Md., reports that her 5-year-old's reading ability has progressed to the point of being able to read the signs on buses. On 16th st. the other day, it came out: "This one goes to Georgia and Elastic" . . . J. E. Hall forwards a classified ad that appeared recently and asks: "What's the matter—don't they allow violins in California?" The ad read: "For sale—violin, $45. Owner moving to California."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Fair-sized load of kindling wood; free for the hauling." (Warfield 6840.)

"Four puppies, 2 months old; part spitz, part fox terrier." (Taylor 8231.)

"Three-month-old housebroken kitten with eight extra toes; appears to be walking on boxing gloves and snowshoes." (Georgia 1238.)

THE IDEA WAS GOOD

I am reading a book that was written to teach . . . How a wife can make "home" more attractive . . . In the meantime my house is a horrible mess . . . For my reading is much too distractive.

Ruth H. Norris
10 N. Summit ave.
Chatham, N. J.

CAN THIS BE?

John Emery of the Silver Spring Optimist Club tells me that I'm invited for a free feed at the club's next meeting (Tuesday, 7 p. m., Stone House Inn) and that I won't be expected to make a speech.

I have been invited out for free dinners before, but always on a basis which our editorial writers love to call quid pro quo.

As the dessert is served, the chairman tinkles a spoon against his glass and announces that at long last the highlight of the evening has been reached.

There follows a smattering of polite applause. Then the membership settles back with that "say-something-funny; go-ahead-and-amuse-us" look on its collective face.

That's when the guest pays a terrible price for his free meal. The audience is predisposed to receive the speaker warmly—but somehow, the harder he works, the flatter his jokes sound. Even to himself.

Besides, I miss more desserts, like that.

But the Silver Spring Optimists vow that there's no catch to their offer. They don't want me to make a speech.

Which gives me pause to wonder. Is it that they're compassionate? Or have they heard about my after dinner speeches?

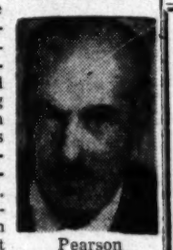
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Liberals Plan Colombia Schism

By Drew Pearson

The Liberal Party's high command in Colombia is secretly laying plans to set up a separate national government, in open defiance of the present Conservative regime.—the Liberal registered voters having abstained from casting ballots in the November 27 presidential election.



Pearson

Liberal strategy is based on the belief that the Colombian army will probably step in and take over the administration if two rival governments emerge, then hold new elections in which the Liberals are certain they will triumph.

Meanwhile, the "kid-glove dictatorship" of President Mariano Ospina Perez is bringing him new headaches daily. Anxious to avoid a show of force, Ospina gave the army only limited powers, although his state-of-siege decree automatically removed authority from all elected officials. The result has been widespread civil disobedience, with numerous town councils and municipal governing boards refusing to disband.

Defiance of censorship and curfew regulations is also frequent, and more than 400 citizens were jailed in Bogota alone during the first four days after the state of siege was declared.

Feuding in Argentina

Rivalry and even open feuding between members of Argentine Dictator Juan Peron's official family now dominates that regime to such an extent that all other considerations frequently get lost in the shuffle.

The handling of the current sugar workers' strike in the northern provinces of Jujuy, Tucuman and Salta offers a prize example of these intracabinet shenanigans.

When more than 12,000 sugar-mill employes walked off their jobs in mid-October, demanding a flat 100 percent increase in wages throughout the industry, the national department of labor (run by the glib gaucho's wife, Dona Evita) at once began to wrangle with the General Confederation of Labor over who was responsible for the strike.

This squabble continued for four weeks, with no concrete effort being made to settle the labor dispute. Then a half-hearted, inept attempt at mediation by the federal arbitration board—which was unable to obtain a firm settlement offer from either mill owners or government authorities — failed completely.

That brought matters to an ugly head. Some operators rounded up a few workers who were willing to break the strike and, with police protection, tried to resume production. But strikers intercepted the first carloads attempting to enter the mill grounds and a pitched battle ensued.

Local authorities, thereupon, urgently petitioned Interior Minister Angel Borlenghi for federal police reinforcements. These were sent, which action promptly brought the angry charge from Evita Peron's labor department that her husband's Minister of the Interior was "meddling" in the situation.

Result of all this: Argentina will have to import 75 percent of its sugar next year.

Capital Capsules

Those Inhospitable Swedes?—The Swedes claim they were merely carrying out Senator Thomas' own request when they failed to roll out the royal carpet for him. The junketing Senators sent word from Oslo that when they got to Stockholm they wanted to rest, didn't want to be burdened with a heavy program. Senator Thomas of Oklahoma wired this ahead to the American Embassy in Stockholm, which, in turn, advised the Swedes to lay off.

Phil and Harry—CIO President Phil Murray, who won a first-class contract for the Steelworkers, without keeping them off the job over four months—as did John L. Lewis—got a big pat on the back from President Truman last week.

"You conducted yourself like a statesman, Phil," said Truman, "and the Nation is indebted to you. Also, you didn't depend upon the Government to carry the ball for you, like some labor leaders I could mention. You won the steel strike yourself, fairly and squarely."

Inefficient Spying—United States military leaders aren't happy about the Central Intelligence Agency. They complain that CIA agents have been picking up trivial gossip and even Soviet information deliberately planted by the Kremlin. This is passed on without proper evaluation. Nothing is done, the brass hats grumble, because CIA hides its inefficiency behind an iron curtain of secrecy. Maybe the CIA should take a few tips from J. Edgar Hoover.

NYLON "Wonderthings"

lavished with Chantilly-type lace

"Because she loves nice things" she yearns for underthings that are "wonderthings." That's why she loves Van Raalte's nylons—for these filmy froths are light as a breath, yet wear fabulously well. And all the care they need is a swish in the suds (never an iron)! Best of all they're lavished with the most delicate of chantilly-like all nylon lace. Petal Pink, Blue Horizon, Cloud White, Dawnglow, Begonia, Sunrise, Mauve and Black in the group. For a real "presentation" ask for a Martha Jean gift-wrap at slight extra charge.
